PLOT TO BLOW UP DAM FOILED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (INS)—A full congressional investigation into a bizarre international plot to wreck Boulder Dam—$126,000,000 pride of the United States Power System—was demanded today by two California members of Congress.

The plot, as disclosed to International News Service, was conceived by a ring of international saboteurs, believed to be Communist-inspired. State Department authorities uncovered the scheme in an unnamed foreign capital, and notified other government agencies.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said that federal agents have "investigated and are now investigating" the plot, but he declined to comment further.

Reps. Hinshaw (R.) of Pasadena and Kramer (D.) of Los Angeles joined in announcing they would immediately demand that the State Department make public the details of the plot, to Congress or to a special congressional committee.

Kramer said he would introduce a resolution in the House calling for a public inquiry of the case, most spectacular instance of plotted sabotage to confront the nation since beginning of the European war.

Hinshaw declared he will concur in this resolution. He said:

"This disclosure is shocking. It makes us more sharply aware of the real and acute menace of sabotage by subversive aliens within our borders. The entire case must be given a thorough, prompt public airing."

FINNS KILL THOUSANDS, WIPE OUT RED DIVISION

HELSINKI, Jan. 8 (AP)—Finnish forces wiped out the 44th Russian division, killing thousands and taking more than 1000 prisoners near Suomussalmi, a special army communique reported today.

"It was in the northern part of the Suomussalmi region, at the narrow 'waistline' of central Finland, that the Finns, a week ago reported the virtual destruction of the invaders' 163d division.

In the new victory the communique said large quantities of arms and material, including 43 tanks, were captured.

British Censor Out In New Shift; Labor Joins in Protests

By NEWELL ROGERS

International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Removal of still another British war-time official was disclosed today with official announcement that Vice-Admiral C. V. Osborne had resigned as chief censor.

The announcement was made as Britain's politically powerful

Trade Unions Congress plunged headlong into the furor over the dismissal of Leslie Hore-Belisha from the war secretaryship.

According to the London Daily Herald Osborne was asked and agreed to resign owing to trouble which the newspaper said arose from dual control of censorship which interfered with the task of Sir Walter Monckton as director general of the press department.

PARLIAMENT JAN. 16

The paper said it was understood the vice admiral would be given another position in the government.

The Trade Union Congress met to consider making a demand for immediate recall of Parliament as a result of Hore-Belisha's dismissal. Labor authorities pictured the congress as concerned lest the trend toward democracy in the British army suffer with Oliver Stanley, a conservative, in the war secretary post.

Government quarters regarded it as extremely unlikely, however, that Parliament would be summoned earlier than the scheduled date of Jan. 16.

British political circles awaited the decision of the Congress—and similar decisions by the Labor and Socialist parties—with rising interest.

Maj. Clement Attlee, parliamentary leader of the Labor Party, and Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the Trade Unions Congress, held a conference on the situation.

CHEER HORE-BELISHA

It was understood the parliamentary opposition might seek an interview with Prime Minister Chamberlain to put forward a demand for recall of Parliament.

Meanwhile, a large crowd, including soldiers, cheered Hore-Belisha when he arrived at the war office for a final call to wind up his official business.

British newspapers continued their barrage of comment on the question, and the Evening News published this banner headline:

"M. P.'s Demand to Be Recalled"

Labor union officials made it clear that they wished continuation of the policies initiated by Hore-Belisha in the army.

"One of our first considerations"

200 Fish Handlers Strike Over Fork

A strike of more than 200 handlers at the Fish Pier today reduced Boston's fish supply as 11 vessels with 653,000 pounds of sea food arrived in port.

When the handlers arrived at the pier today they refused to work with the one-tined fork, ordered by Dr. Patrick H. Mullenwey, deputy health commissioner under the present system of a $5 flat rate pay scale. They demand an hourly rate of $1 for all overtime. They say the one-tined fork cuts down the speed in handling by 60 per cent.

A conference among fishermen's union officials, Dr. Mullenwey and Edward H. Cooley, manager of the fishermen's association, was held at the pier when the handlers refused to work.

After an hour's discussion Dr. Mullenwey announced he would make no further concessions to the handlers, and that they would have to use the one-tined fork.

In handling the fish from the holds of the vessel to the pier Dr. Mullenwey gave the handlers a concession, allowing them to use the three-tined forks which have been used for 300 years. This move was expected to avert a strike.

After the conference, however,

130th Day

By the Associated Press
Finland today reported a new victory over Russia in wiping out a second division of invading troops and capture of more than 1000 prisoners and huge quantities of equipment.

A special Finnish army communique said the 44th Russian Division, probably containing between 15,000 and 17,000 men, had been smashed in the Suomussalmi sector.

Neighboring Scandinavian nations expressed continued concern over their own roles in the European wars. Some newspapers declared that any attempt to convert Scandinavia from a channel for Finnish aid into a base for Allied operations against Germany would mean a fight.

A high authority in Budapest said the foreign ministers of Hungary and Italy had agreed on a defensive pact assuring Hungary of Italian military aid in event of invasion by Germany or Russia.

In Rome, however, such responsible sources as Virginio Gayda, editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, denied that any new formal agreements had been negotiated by the two foreign ministers.

War conditions were further impressed on Britain today by the start of food rationing. Butter, bacon, ham and sugar were on the restricted list. Other meats will be limited next week.

The furor continued in England over the dismissal of Leslie Hore-Belisha as war secretary and there were reported demands that Parliament meet earlier than its scheduled session, Jan. 16.

A more liberal censorship policy seemed to be foreshadowed, however, by resignation of Vice-Admiral C. V. Osborne, top news censor.

ROMANCE—With Harvard's Torby MacDonald, 1939 football captain, due home today from Florida vacation, query by fellow-students face him on the subject of romance with pretty Kathleen Kennedy, above, daughter of U. S. Ambassador to Great Britain.

SEE KENNEDY GIRL, TORBY IN ROMANCE

Torby MacDonald, "hard-luck" leader of Harvard's 1939 football team, was due home today from a Florida vacation as house guest of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy—with fellow students at Harvard wondering about a possible romance with the ambassador's pretty daughter, Kathleen.

For the last 10 days the Crimson's football leader was constant escort for the bewitching daughter of the ambassador to Britain, and gossip centered a "heart interest" between the pair. But Jack MacDonald, Torby's dad, laughed at the report of romance.

"Why, Torby has been a young Jack Kennedy's roommate at Harvard for the last three years," the father said. "Torby went down as Jack's guest on Christmas Day. He will be home today. He wrote us he was having a wonderful time, but this romance talk is all news to me."

Ambassador Kennedy has had a busy time for two years denying his daughter's "reported engagements."

First it was to Joseph P. Grace, young heir to a shipping fortune, and afterwards to the Marquis of Hartington, heir to the title and estates of the Duke of Devonshire.

Georgia Coleman's Condition Fairly Good

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8 (AP)—The condition of Olympic diving champion Georgia Coleman, operated upon for a liver ailment after a long illness, was described as "fairly good" today.

His death brought to five the total of deaths due to weather conditions in New England during the last 24 hours.

Herbert D. Raymond, 32, of Park ave., Arlington, father of a boy nine years old and two little girls, four and six, was pronounced dead two hours after his machine crashed off the bridge. His body was identified by his employer.

More than 1000 persons gathered along the bridge on both sides after the accident, to watch police, firemen and divers work two hours to free the body from the machine. A special detail of police was sent to handle traffic.

George Fallon of Mears ave., Quincy, sitting in a car in Summer st., facing South Boston just west of the I st. bridge, said he saw the other auto approaching and that suddenly it began to skid, crashed through the guard fence, snapped off a trolley wire pole and nosed down into the water.

CRIES TO AUTOISTS

Samuel Blitchman, drawmaker at the bridge, said a man was the sole occupant of the car and that at it descended slowly from sight he shrieked to the man:

"Get out! Get out!"

But the driver apparently was unconscious. The fire department and police were called and attempts were immediately begun to locate the auto, 30 feet below the surface.

Continued cold and a new storm tightened the grip of winter on Boston and New England today as this latest of "weather accidents" occurred.

Ice clogged Massachusetts harbors and in many sections highways with ice patches remained traffic hazards. Latest cold-weather fatalities included:

James Pantolau of Gardner, dead of injuries suffered when auto skidded and crashed; Marie Carpenter, 9, Hodgdon, Me., coasting accident victim; Miss Mary Daly, 54, of Pittsfield, killed in a fall; George Roznok, 50, of Bradford, Ct., killed by skidding truck. In the Malden river, workmen attempted to float the tug boat Bessie, which settled in eight feet of water when ice stove a hole in the hull.

Eight-year-old Eileen Collins, of Dorchester ave., South Boston, was critically injured today when she slipped on icy pavement and fell in front of an automobile out-sid-her home.

HER BONES FRACTURED

Police said she was struck by a car driven by George Gundersen of Southern ave., Dorchester. At Carney Hospital doctors said Eileen suffered a fractured left arm and collar bone. Her name was placed on the danger list.

Harbor ice is forming rapidly near Boston and on the bay side of Winthrop huge quantities of ice are piled high. In Wollaston bay, ice is reported thicker and more widespread than at any time since the record cold of 1933-34.

Woman's Hair Clue to Killer

FORT HUNT, Va., Jan. 8 (AP)—Strands of silky brown hair, clutched in the hand of a dead man, were clues for G-men today in the search for a slayer.

The body, its head battered, was sprawled 100 yards from the Mount Vernon Memorial highway—about 15 miles south of Washington, D. C.—when passing motorists found it yesterday and called police. A pool of blood colored the new-fallen snow where it lay.

Near the dead man, identified as S. M. Little, 29-year-old Fredericksburg, W. Va., tobacco salesman, were a powder puff, two camels cloths and a man's handkerchief.

Franklin, Jr., Wife All Right Again

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., and his wife, the former Ethel du Pont, who were slightly injured in an automobile accident near Winchester, Va., ten days ago, had practically recovered today. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Sr., said Ethel had to make another trip to Philadelphia to her dentist but that Franklin Jr., had finished his treatment and that they both looked very presentable.

TWICE ROBBED—Her purse snatched by a young thug, Ruth Williams arrives at work on Haverhill st. and learns, shortly after, that she has used her stolen house key to ransack her home. Thug has office keys, so police are guarding the place.

Thief Grabs Girl's Bag, Robs Her Home

After snatching her purse and outdancing her in a North End chase, a young thief later ransacked her Roxbury home, Ruth Williams, stenographer for a Haverhill st. wholesale novelty house, told police today.

From her purse the robber got $2 as well as personal papers and keys to her home in Warren st., Roxbury, Miss Williams said.

Screaming, she chased the thug down Haverhill st., but he got away in an auto driven by an accomplice.

Later her mother telephoned her that their home had been robbed of $10 and food in the ice box.

Because the home was left littered with cigarette butts police believe the invaders leisurely ransacked the home while the mother was away.

Also stolen from Miss Williams' purse were the keys to her office. Police placed a guard there to prevent possible robbery while a new lock is being installed.

Britain Begins Food Rationing

LONDON, Jan. 8 (INS)—War-time rationing of food—sugar, bacon, tinned and butter—went into effect today. Under the present arrangement, each individual will be allowed 12 ounces of sugar, four ounces of butter and four ounces of bacon or ham each week.

For the time being, however, the rationing will apply only to retail shops, and patrons of restaurants will be permitted to eat as much as they wish.

Meat rationing is expected to begin within a month or two.

RICH F. D. HUNTINGTON KILLS DOG, THEN SELF

HADLEY, Jan. 8—His faithful dog still by his side, Frederic D. Huntington, wealthy 50-year-old treasurer of the Realsilk Hosiery Co., today was found shot to death in the snow-covered cemetery here.

Together, the bodies of Huntington and the shepherd dog were found, covered with snow, at the entrance to the Old Hadley Cemetery by Huntington's brother, Dr. James L. Huntington, noted Boston physician and child specialist.

The associate medical examiner, Dr. Lawrence N. Durgin of Amherst, said Huntington had shot the dog 23 times then himself.

Before he put the muzzle of the pistol into his mouth to end his own life, Huntington evidently had knelt on the ground beside his dog, his arms about him, and shot him through the brain, state police said.

Police said they believed Huntington had come to Hadley last night looking for his brother, who has a home there. Dr. Huntington, however, was in Boston.

Officers said Huntington's friends told them he had long been unhappy because of a heart ailment.

ICE STAR AT HARVARD

He was born in Ashfield, Dec. 5, 1889, and was a resident of Bedford Village, Westchester, N. Y. He is survived by his wife, who was called to Hadley by police.

He had been a noted amateur hockey player in his youth and was chosen captain of the All-America hockey team in 1912, which was the year he graduated from Harvard University.

Huntington and his wife had long been prominent in New York society.

TROOPER ON TRIAL IN KILLING

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa., Jan. 8—Carbon County courthouse was guarded heavily today as, seven months after the event, Corp. Benjamin Franklin of the State motor police went on trial for the slaying of 14-year-old "doll girl" Joan Stevens.

Franklin pleaded innocent to murder and manslaughter charges as the trial opened.

Feeling has been running high here since little Joan was riddled with bullets from an automatic pistol on June 5 last. The 200-pound corporal sought a change of venue, declaring he could not expect a fair trial from a Carbon County jury. His petition was denied.

Selection of a miners' jury went forward as four ace attorneys prepared to defend their client. Youthful Asst. Dist. Atty. Albert Heimbach will be assisted in the prosecution by Deputy Atty. Gen. Harrington Adams.

Adams was appointed after the slain child's mother appealed to Gov. Arthur James.

SHOT IN FROWL CAR

Pennsylvania legislators, meanwhile watched the trial, ready to demand repeal of the law which combined the crack state police with the highway patrol, causing traffic men like Franklin to be sent out on detective duty.

An honor student in the Mauch Chunk School, Joan was shot to death as she sat on the rear seat of Franklin's frowl car, parked on a deserted road half a mile from the Stevens home.

After the shooting, her body was rushed to a local undertaking parlor. The doors were barred to local police. Word was sent out by troopers that an Allentown woman had killed herself.

Joan's parents learned of their daughter's death via neighborhood grapevine, not official notification. They got word 24 hours after the shooting.

AUTOPSY AFTER BURIAL

Franklin was admitted to $5000 bail in the chambers of County Judge Thomas and returned to duty on June 6. The next day he told a coroner's jury he shot in self-defense after the girl pulled an "automatic" on him.

The "automatic" was not shown to the jury, and later reporters discovered that the "automatic" was a toy cap pistol.

Joan was buried without an autopsy on June 8, but her body was exhumed on June 13 after formation of a "Citizens' Justice for Joan Committee." Pressure was brought to bear on the prosecutor and to cause the suspension of Franklin.

An autopsy showed that eight bullets had blasted the schoolgirl's chest, neck and arm. County Judge Thomas said he believed Joan had a real pistol when he admitted the trooper to bail. He had not seen shown the toy weapon.

Buckner's Jail Term Upheld

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (AP)—The conviction of William P. Buckner, Jr., promoter; William J. Gillespie, broker, and Felipe Buencamino, member of the Philippine Assembly, on charges of conspiracy to defraud holders of Philippine railway bonds was affirmed today by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Buckner was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $2500 last July 6. Gillespie and Buencamino each was sentenced to 18 months in prison, and fined $5000 and $2500 respectively.

Car-Hurling Case Dropped

Although she had promised to appear in Lynn district court to swear out a complaint against a Lynn cafe owner, whom she accused of throwing her from his car, Mrs. Roberta Dean, 29, Lynn waitress, failed to keep her date with police today.

Sergt. John Polo reported that he waited in vain in the clerk's office for quite some time, expecting Mrs. Dean to appear.

He added that the man against whom she was to complain has been keeping company with her for some time.

The young woman was picked up, injured and unconscious, in Green st., Lynn, by passing motorists, then given first-aid treatment by police.

According to the police, the girl told of accepting a ride home after finishing her work in a Lynn restaurant. On the way, she was quoted as saying, a dispute arose and her companion threw her from the car.

Former Kaiser Kept Indoors by Bad Cold

DOORN, The Netherlands, Jan. 8 (AP)—Former Kaiser Wilhelm, 89, remained in his room today under treatment for a cold, but his household expressed no alarm over his condition. He has kept indoors several days.

The former kaiser, who will be 81 Jan. 27, is under care of a German physician, who forbade his attendance at the funeral for Count Godard Beninck tomorrow. The count, who died Thursday, gave the kaiser his first refuge when he fled into exile in 1918.

NARROW GAUGE'S WORKERS IN PLEA

Backing up Narrow Gauge railroad employees, thousands of commuters in Winthrop today began a last ditch fight to prevent abandonment of the town's only transportation system—an abandonment sanctioned by Federal Judge George C. Sweeney and set for Jan. 27.

Citing a U. S. Supreme Court ruling written only two months ago by Justice Felix Frankfurter, employees carried their appeal to Gov. Saltonstall and Atty. Gen. Paul A. Dever for similar action, similar to that taken in the case of the Old Colony railroad.

At the same time, town meeting members—who twice have voted down an alternate plan to permit the Elevated to take over the road—gathered their strength for a third test at a special town meeting tonight.

FIGHTS EL PLAN

Holding out against the Boston Elevated "at any cost" was Selectman Walter G. Baker, who from the beginning has warned against accepting the Elevated and "assessments on Elevated debts."

Earlier he had the support of David Belcher, with the third number of the board, Ross Belcher, supporting the Elevated plan.

It was reported today that Belcher had joined forces with Belcher, declaring that "some service must be provided" for the day the Narrow Gauge closes down.

Following a meeting of citizens and employees of the defunct railroad, Eugene W. Mitchell, president of the Carmen's Union, made a direct appeal to both Gov. Saltonstall and Atty. Gen. Dever.

It was based on Justice Frankfurter's decision that the Federal court at New Haven had no jurisdiction to permit the Old Colony to shut down. They argue that the Narrow Gauge is an intra-state system and that Federal Judge Sweeney was not within his rights in permitting it to close.

APPEAL TO GOVERNOR

To Gov. Saltonstall, the following appeal was sent:

"The Department of Public Utilities and the Massachusetts Supreme Courts have said that Massachusetts should have been consulted as to permission to discontinue service on an intra-state railroad.

"Federal Judge Sweeney, without first submitting the question of abandonment to the Legislature, has ordered the Narrow Gauge to close Jan. 27, thus depriving 6,000,000 passengers of normal transportation service and 300 employees of their jobs."

To Atty. Gen. Dever, this appeal was made:

"The status of the Narrow Gauge railroad, serving more than 6,000,000 commuters annually, in contrast to the 2,000,000 served by the Old Colony division, must be taken up by the Legislature before abandonment is permitted.

"We expect you to take an appeal from the decision of Judge Sweeney as you so nobly did in the Old Colony case, in which service was saved."

Holdup-Killing Youth Indicted

Michael Virga, 17-year-old South End alleged bandit-slayer, was indicted on a charge of first degree murder by a Suffolk County grand jury today.

Virga, police testified, was the would-be bandit who entered a small South End variety store the night of Jan. 2 and shot to death the clerk, Vasco Pina, also of the South End.

The indictment will be read to Virga within 24 hours.

G-Hunt Suspect In Kidnaping of Boy, 8

Agents from the Federal Bureau of Investigation today entered the strange case of the kidnaping of Billy Johnson, 8-year-old Somerville boy, as the result of his story that a man had taken him to New York on a three-day trip.

The agents first conferred with Somerville police officials and then interviewed the boy in an independent probe because of the alleged violation of the Lindbergh law in taking the boy across a state line.

Meanwhile police had set two traps to capture the man named in a warrant as the lad's abductor. The boy trudged home from Boston a South End, while police were searching for him through Massachusetts, and told conflicting stories of travels around the state since Friday with a neighbor who had befriended him.

His mother, Mrs. Edward Johnson of Somerville ave., Somerville, immediately took him to the Somerville police headquarters.

The boy said he was on his way to school on Friday morning when he met the man on Somerville ave. and accepted his invitation for a ride on a street car into Boston.

"He asked me if I would go to New York if he bought two bus tickets and I said 'sure'."

"We stayed in New York that night. We went around the city on Saturday. Saturday night we rode to Springfield on a bus and got there next morning. Then he bought a paper at a railroad station that said I was missing and the police were searching for me. He sent my parents a telegram."

"Then we took a train to Boston and when we got here we had a ride in the subway."

PLAN RITES FOR 'ROCK-A-BYE' COMPOSER

The frail body of Mrs. Effie I. Carlton, 81, composer of the famous lullaby "Rock-a-bye Baby," will be laid to rest beside that of her father, Dr. William E. Crockett, in Mt. Peake Cemetery, Waltham, it was disclosed today.

Following a lonely death in City Hospital, the body of the impoverished woman was claimed today by her cousin, James Marshall of Lansdowne, Pa., who turned funeral arrangements over to an undertaker, W. H. Graham. Graham said arrangements had not been completed, but revealed the final resting place of the former stage actress whose song had lulled millions of babes to rest. Several days ago she suffered a cerebral hemorrhage at her modest room in St. Botolph st., But Easy—provided by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

While touring the country with William Gillette she composed the melody at the age of 15 to lull to sleep the restless baby of a neighbor.

She took her composition to a Boston music publisher at her teacher's urging, and he snapped it up as a find and popularized it through a road show.

REVERE IN JURY'S DOG TRACK QUIZ

Investigation into the earnings and administration of the Revere dog track and a probe of income tax returns by four track officials will be made by the federal grand jury, U. S. Atty. Edmund J. Brandon said today. The grand jury starts its probe of the Dighton dog track tomorrow.

Today the jurors are weighing the activities of a reported automobile theft ring which has been operating in the western part of the State and in Connecticut. Brandon revealed today that he had lined up 30 witnesses in connection with the Revere dog track probe. He has also been receiving anonymous letters and telephone calls offering information which will aid his probe of the track officials.

Seven witnesses have been summoned for tomorrow's session of the grand jury when it takes up the Dighton track case. Among the seven is one woman.

"While this will be a complete investigation into the dog racing tracks," Brandon said today, "We are particularly interested in the income tax reports of track officials and the comparison of those returns with track earnings, dividends and salaries." It was learned that a legislative agent, a well-known politician and a prominent legal light are among those whose income returns are to be scrutinized.

200-in Fish Pier Strike

the handlers turned deaf ears to a plea by Capt. Patrick H. McHugh, secretary-treasurer of the Atlantic Fishermen's Union.

In an address on the pier he told them that refusing to work would result in hardship on about 3200 men engaged in the industry. He asked them to return to work, to try the one timed forks and promised further action if the plan was proved inoperative.

WARN BOATS AWAY

After a stormy session of a half-hour, the handlers sent McHugh to confer at 2 p. m. with representatives of the Federated Fishing Boats of New England, owners of the vessels involved. They reiterated their refusal to return to work unless promised a $1 an hour rate over overtime.

Many owners of fishing vessels are radioing their captains to remain on the fishing banks until the present crisis is settled. They point out that the fish will only spoil if brought into Boston and left in the vessels.

Gauss as Envoy To Australia

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (AP)—President Roosevelt nominated Clarence E. Gauss of Connecticut today to be the first United States minister to Australia.

Formal diplomatic relations between Australia and the United States have just been established. Previously Australia has transacted diplomatic business with this government through the British embassy.

The President also submitted to the Senate reappointments of five members of the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for terms of two years beginning Jan. 22.

They are Emil Schriar, of Illinois, Carroll E. Merriam, of Kansas, Charles E. Henderson, of Nevada, Howard J. Klossner, of Minnesota, and Sam Husbands of South Carolina.

The President also named Brig. Gen. Guy N. Henninger, of the Nebraska National Guard, to be a brigadier general in the adjutant general's department of the United States National Guard.

Secretary of Bund Pleads Perjury Guilt

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (INS)—James Wheeler Hill, secretary of the German-American Bund until his resignation last week, today pleaded guilty to perjury charges which carry a possible sentence of six years in jail. Sentence will be imposed Feb. 21. Hill continues free in $5000 bail.

The former hand official admitted that on two occasions, before the McNaboe (State) legislative committee on June 22, 1938, and again when trying to qualify as a juror before the commissioner of jurors on June 9, 1939, he said he was born in San Francisco and was an American citizen. He is said to have been born in Libau, Latvia, and is not a citizen.

N. E. Retail Clothiers Open Convention

Several hundred dealers in men's wear gathered at the Parker House today for the three-day annual convention of the New England Retail Clothiers and Furnishers Association.

The clothiers, after greetings by Gov. Saltonstall, were to hear nationally recognized leaders of the industry, including President Edward M. Mitten of the Jordan Marsh Company, who was to discuss problems of men's wear merchandising.

Tomorrow the convention will be addressed by C. R. Palmer, president of the Cluett, Peabody Co.; President John Wyckoff Mettler of the Interwoven Stocking Co., President Elmer Ward of the Goodall Co. and President Rae Hickok of the Hickok Manufacturing Co.

Newly-elected officers will be announced at luncheon at the Parker House Wednesday. The dinner closing the convention will be held Wednesday night.

Once known the country over as a stronghold of conservatism in dress, Boston and New England have abandoned "sartorial stuffiness" and now set the pace for style blended with good taste, according to men's wear experts.

Mayer Tobin, Senator Lodge, Atty.-Gen. Paul Dever, Police Commr. Timilty, Sheriff Sullivan and a score of other figures in public life are held up by the experts as shining examples of well-dressed Bay Staters of the new era.

Dick Edwards of Jordan's, president of the association, is being assisted in convention plans by Leonard W. Libbey of the Continental, Sanford Litwin of Hovey's, Harold Thompson of Kennedy's and Harry Fros of Leopold Morse.

JACKSON 'HARMONY' SPLIT

There's calling it the Jackson Day "harmony dinner" but a threat of plenty of fireworks was forecast today throughout Democratic ranks for tonight's $25-a-plate New Deal spread.

For former Lt. Gov. Francis E. Kelly, big vote-getter of his party, has been silenced as a speaker—invited to attend but warned he could not speak.

Friends of Kelly were asking why the man who had been toiling for the past six months to restore harmony among the widely split Democratic groups should not be permitted to speak. They declared such a slight was "unbelievable" to a man who was strong enough to defeat Gov. Saltonstall in the race for lieutenant-governor.

As proof of party loyalty, the Kelly followers pointed out that he was the only one of the three defeated in the 1938 gubernatorial primary to join in the election fight of the Democratic slate for state office.

The Kelly supporters claimed he had been trying for months to patch up the differences between former Govs. Hurley, Curley and Ely and had been doing his utmost to strengthen the state Democratic committee and to select an acting chairman during the illness of Joseph McGrath. Questioned at his home in Dorchester, former Lieut.-Gov. Kelly confirmed the report.

"Yes," he said, "unfortunately it is only too true, much as I regret to have to admit it. I am among the invited guests, but I was served notice that I shall not be permitted to speak even so much as a minute or two, prior to the speaking between 9 and 10 o'clock which is to be broadcast on the radio.

"The speech of President Roosevelt will be on the air from 10 until 11. I thought I might be permitted to say a few words before 9 o'clock, but Michael McGrath, who has charge of the speaking program, has served notice that the only guests who will be allowed to speak will be the three former governors, Hurley, Curley and Ely, Atty.-Gen. Dever, and Mayor Tobin."

Beal Urges Uniform For State Laborers

In order to distinguish State highway laborers from WPA workers, whom he described as "loafers loafing on their shovels," State Public Works Commissioner John W. Beal is considering a plan to put the State laborers in uniform.

He explained the public then could see at a glance who was doing the work. The State would supply the uniforms, which would be orange and black, Beal said. The equipment, he said, would be manufactured in State prisons.

Real Star Spangled Banner Flies Here

A most historic Old Glory flew today on Boston Common.

It was the famous flag which inspired the writing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by Francis Scott Key and was hoisted today in special observance of the 150th anniversary of the battle of New Orleans. It was there that Andrew Jackson and his fighting men defeated a British force of far greater size.

POLITICOS AWAIT F. D. R. SPEECH

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (AP)—Although President Roosevelt's address at the $100-a-plate Jackson day dinner here tonight is expected to be non-partisan, Democratic gatherings in other cities may hear political oratory keynoting the party's 1940 campaign.

The general Washington opinion is that the President will limit his theme to the need for national unity in facing foreign crisis, leaving to administration lieutenants—such as Robert H. Jackson, Atty. Gen.—

nate—any political message from the New Deal.

Jackson will speak at Cleveland, while Secretary Wallace will talk at Des Moines and Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, at Raleigh, N. C.

Dinners will be held in 44 states, with anticipated profits of $700,000 going to the Democratic campaign fund and to the party deficit of $219,000. Only in the Capital, however, will the guests pay $100 for a $5 banquet.

A few party leaders had felt that Mr. Roosevelt might follow custom at these Democratic rallies in honor of Andrew Jackson and make a straight-from-the-shoulder political talk.

Lending strength to this belief was the fact that Republican leaders had spurned invitations to the affair.

The President will begin speaking at 10 p. m., eastern standard time, with his remarks broadcast by NBC, CBS and MBS hookups. Democratic Chairman Farley will introduce him, and sitting next to him will be Vice President Garner, who has announced his Presidential candidacy regardless of Mr. Roosevelt's decision on a third term.

JULIET'S PET DOG NOW IN LIMELIGHT

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Even poor little "Gypsy," the pet dog which made the elopement trip with her mistress, Eileen Herrick "Juliet" Lowther, had her troubles today.

For somebody telephoned the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that "Gypsy" was not in fit hands, and Eileen announced that the somebody was Mrs. Walter Herrick, her socialite mother.

Officials of the society went to the hotel where Eileen and her "Romeo," George Lowther, 3rd., have a honeymoon suite to investigate but did not get into the suite. Little "Gypsy" was the ruse used by Eileen to get out of her parent's swank apartment and fly off with her "Romeo."

The dog, taken out "just for a walk," made the elopement trip to North Conway, N. H., and is still with the honeymooners.

At the same time, Mrs. Herrick declared that her newly married daughter "is absolutely helpless." She made the remark to reporters in revealing that Eileen has made no further attempt to communicate with her mother and father since first arriving in New York from North Conway.

Mrs. Herrick stressed the fact that her daughter's concluding remark at that time was; "I'll see you if I can."

She said this "convinced me it was a controlled conversation." She conceded "there is nothing we can do about" the marriage, which the parents had sought strenuously to prevent.

"We checked up and found the marriage was perfectly legal," she added.

Meanwhile, in their "honeymoon suite" at the Hotel New Yorker, the newlyweds received newspapermen and said they did not intend immediately to telephone or see the Herricks, the bride declaring she was busy "making plans and attending to business." While not elaborating on the "business," she said the "plans" concerned a wedding trip to Nassau in about a week.

BISHOP'S CONDITION SAME

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 8.—No change was reported today in the condition of Bishop John E. Peterson, 63, of Manchester, who a week ago underwent an operation.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE LOWTHER, 3D
Coffee for Two in Honeymoon Apartment

Man, 61, Bride, 28, Part in 3 Months

A pre-Leap Year marriage of only three months ago went on the marital rocks in Suffolk court today where Ivan Leroy Healy, 61, was granted a petition to have himself adjudged justifiably living apart from his 28-year-old bride.

Petition for a similar ruling was denied the bride, Mrs. Loretta Healy, after he told his story of her proposing marriage and leaving on their wedding night to stay with a girl friend.

Healy, proprietor of a lodging house in Warren ave., South End, said she came home the day after the wedding, Sept. 23, and remained at home for three or four days, but again went back to her girl friend, Eva King of Shawmut ave., South End.

The last time she stayed at home was Oct. 10, despite her pre-marital love letters which she used to seal with a lipstick impression of her lips, he testified.

Mrs. Stella May Mitchell, who lives in the Healy rooming house with her husband son, testified the young bride had told her Healy was kind to her and "gave her everything she wanted."

Mrs. Healy, testifying in her own behalf, admitted arguments with her elderly husband. She said they first met at a Fall River cafe and that he began his courtship immediately.

British Allow Liner Manhattan to Sail

LONDON, Jan. 8 (AP).—The United States Liner Manhattan sailed today toward Genoa after being released yesterday from overnight detention by the British Contraband Control at Gibraltar.

The United States Lines, Manhattan's owners, were said to have agreed that if the British found any contraband in the vessel's manifest it would be placed at British disposal in Genoa. The manifest was left for British examination at Gibraltar.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8 (INS).—Rufus C. Dawes, 72, who ran Chicago's high successful World's Fair in 1933-34, died after a heart attack today.

SALVE-NOSE DROPS

Budget Group Plan Blocked by McNary

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (AP) — Sen. Harrison (D.), of Mississippi, failed today in an effort to obtain immediate Senate approval of his plan to create a special congressional budget-making committee.

Harrison, chairman of the Senate finance committee, had suggested a 21-man joint committee to examine President Roosevelt's budget and make comprehensive fiscal recommendations of its own.

Harrison had told the Senate he would ask immediate approval of the proposal, but withheld his request after Minority Leader McNary (R.) of Oregon served notice he would object unless the proposed joint committee were instructed specifically to study defense appropriations and make a survey of national military policy.

Under Senate rules, a single objection can prevent immediate consideration of a resolution which has not been considered by a Senate committee.

ENCOUNTERS OPPOSITION

Harrison said he had no objection to McNary's suggestion, but Sen. Byrnes (D.) of South Carolina said he would block consideration of the Harrison plan if the Mississippi senator accepted McNary's proposal.

Harrison previously had claimed White House sympathy for his plan, but it has met opposition from various other quarters, and there were indications it might be allowed to gather dust in a House pigeon hole until the 1941 post-election Congress meets.

The anti-lynching bill was forced onto the House floor by a petition of 214 members, held over from last year's session.

A majority of the House could vote against debating the measure at this time. But it was considered so unlikely that leaders arranged for six hours of oratory beginning tomorrow noon.

KILLED IN SENATE

The House passed the bill by an overwhelming majority a year ago, but it was filibustered to death in the Senate. It would not surprise even supporters of the measure if the Senate were to block consideration entirely at this session.

Chairman Sumners (D.) of Texas, of the House Judiciary Committee criticized proponents for reviving the bill "at a time when democracy is fighting for its life."

Citing a Tuskegee Institute survey that only three lynchings took place in the United States last year, Sumners told reporters.

"In the face of statistics that prove the states have solved this problem, proponents of this bill are saying to the world that democracy has failed and that a federal law is necessary to do the job."

POINT OUT 'JOKER'

The measure would impose a $5000 fine, five years' imprisonment, or both on any state or local official convicted of negligence in failing to protect a person from lynching.

Governmental subdivisions where a lynching occurred would be liable for $10,000 damages payable to the victim's nearest relative.

A. F. of L. Demands

End of Trade Pacts

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (AP) — A demand that reciprocal trade agreements with 21 foreign nations be scrapped was sent to Congress today by the American Federation of Labor.

The Federation's voice was added to the opposition to the administration trade program through the wage earners' protective conference, AFL tariff group. It came out against continuing the President's power to exchange tariff concessions with other countries.

The battle over the trade agreements will be formally opened Thursday when the House ways and means committee begins hearings on a resolution to continue the program for three years. The present authority expires on June 12.

As the law stands, the agreements already signed with foreign nations would continue in force regardless of the extension of the program.

The AFL would levy a tax sufficient to make the delivered cost of foreign products equal to the cost of American-made goods with which they compete.

Boston Dredge Sunk By Delaware River Ice

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 8 (AP) — The electric suction dredge Saurus, owned by the Tremont Dredging Co. of Boston, sank at a Delaware City wharf early today after the hull had been stove in by ice in the Delaware river. The four men on board escaped.

The Saurus arrived at Delaware City from Boston Friday to dredge the old entrance to the Chesapeake and Delaware canal, but hadn't started to work.

Norway, Sweden Sound Warning

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Jan. 8 (AP) — Scandinavian newspapers today declared Sweden and Norway would reject "with arms" if necessary any attempt by a great power to use their territory as a springboard for an attack against another.

This assertion was made to refute German press declarations that the Allies were using the pretext of aid to Finland as an excuse to gain a foothold for an attack on Germany.

Rearrest Her on Check Charge

LOWELL, Jan. 8 (AP) — Only a few days after she had won temporary freedom on charges of stealing checks from mail boxes, Mrs. Dorothy E. Jackson, 22, was seized again in her home here, this time as a federal parole violator.

Mrs. Jackson, mother of two, had been released from jail Friday on her own recognizance in Lowell district court, pending hearing on charges of forging four checks. In arresting her today, U. S. Deputy Marshal Michael Barry said the second check theft charges constituted violation of probation she had received four months ago.

HUNGARIAN PACT REPORTED, DENIED

BUDAPEST, Jan. 8 (AP)—A high authority today reported the foreign ministers of Hungary and Italy had agreed on a defensive military alliance assuring Hungary of Italian support against any invasion by Germany or Russia.

The agreement was said to have been reached by the two foreign ministers, Count Istvan Csaky of Hungary and Count Galeazzo Ciano of Italy, in Venice where they have been conferring over the week end.

This authority said Csaky was expected to arrive in Budapest tomorrow to submit the text of such an agreement to the Hungarian Crown Council. If the Council approves he then will return to Rome for formal signature of the pact.

Yugoslavia, lying between Italy and Hungary, was understood to be unwilling to join any outright alliance with her two neighbors. It was reported, however, that she would join in a triple friendship pact which presumably would permit Italy to move troops through her territory in going to Hungary's aid if that became necessary.

SEEK RUMANIAN PACT

Ciano was said to have urged Hungary to seek at least a temporary agreement with Rumania over the Magyar minorities in Transylvania, territory which Rumania won in the break-up of the old Austro-Hungarian empire after the World War.

Dispatches from Bucharest said that Rumania's foreign minister, Grigore Gafencu, was planning to visit Ciano in connection with Italy's efforts to settle Rumanian-Hungarian problems peacefully.

The reported decision of the Hungarian and Italian foreign ministers to recommend an alliance to their governments was said to have been reached not only because of fear that Russia might strike against a southeastern neighbor but also because of disturbing advices from Germany.

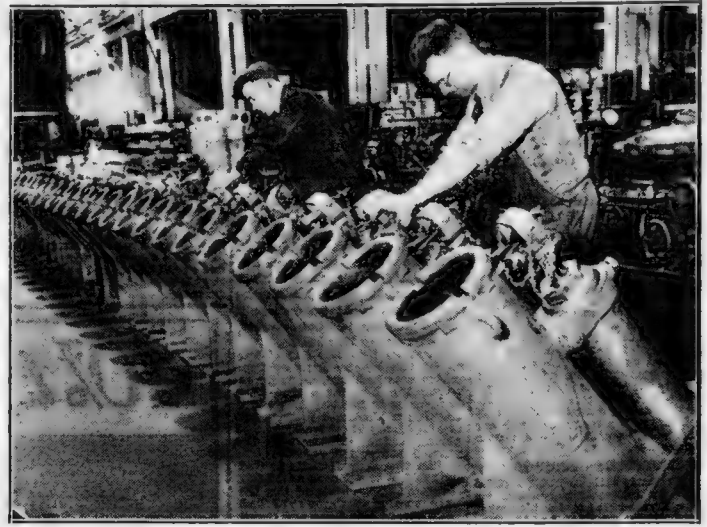

NAZIS DISGRUNTLED

These reports, which high sources said played an important role in the Venice talks, were that Nazi leaders, disgruntled with Rumanian refusal to send greater food supplies to Germany, were strongly considering marching through Hungary to Rumania.

Another reason for such a move was said to be Germany's fear that Britain, France and Turkey were planning to create an eastern front and that Germany must find good defensive frontiers deep in the Balkans quickly.

gary's aid in defense of the Balkans against danger of invasion by Russia.

Such responsible sources as Virgilio Gayda, editor of Il Giornale d'Italia who usually speaks for the government, denied flatly, however, that any new formal agreements had been negotiated by Foreign Minister Count Ciano and the Hungarian Foreign Minister, Count Istvan Csaky, in their week-end conferences at Venice.

Gayda, writing for his newspaper from Venice, said the meeting of the two diplomats was a warning to everybody that "Hungary is at the side of Italian policy in the general lines which is tracing, and in the methods which it intends to follow for its development, just as Italy stands beside Hungary in the particular problems which she has raised and which form the substance of her foreign policy."

Nothing was disclosed of the methods Italy intends to follow to keep war out of the Balkans.

Gayda said that Hungary "intends to insist on peaceful methods" for the settlement of her territorial claims, particularly those against Rumania for Transylvania, a district transferred from Hungary to Rumania at the end of the World War.

Gayda warned, however, that such an attitude must not serve as a pretense for other countries to try to dodge "a realistic plan of frank study and reasonable solution of pending problems."

He then reviewed the Italian viewpoint that it would be "a fatal error" to delay settlement of problems which could be solved peacefully, considering the uncertainty of European events.

With Russia on the frontiers of Hungary and Rumania, Italy particularly is urging these two countries to come to terms.

Finnish high command to have lost the outstanding engagement in the guerrilla fighting that persisted over the week end.

The high command communique reviewing Saturday's operations said that in the Salla sector of the central eastern front.

"An attempt by an enemy ski detachment to outflank our troops was defeated.

"The bodies of more than 300 enemy dead remained on the field, together with 14 machine-guns and other material."

(Dispatches reaching Stockholm from the Salla sector highlighted the rigors of warfare there in the icy wilderness just above the Arctic Circle.)

(A Finnish patrol was reported to have come upon a Russian outpost, protected by barbed-wire in the drifted snow. The Finns were amazed at the silence of their enemy's gun as the patrol inched closer. The Finns, it was said, finally closed in on the silent outpost and found the entire force, 150 men, frozen to death.)

Military experts expressed belief the Finns and their ally, the weather, had forced the Russian command to revamp its entire winter campaign plan. The Finnish communique said that in the main theater of the war, the Karelian Isthmus, "the enemy has begun digging in and setting up barbed wire entanglements to strengthen its positions."

Military observers were divided, however, as to whether the Isthmus front digging-in meant the Russians intended to sit the winter out there without a general offensive. Some felt the stalemate in the far north and on the middle eastern front might impel the Russians toward a face-saving smash on the Isthmus, original point of Russian penetration, or north of Lake Ladoga.

AIR RAIDS SLACKEN

If the weather and the present power of the Finns to resist mean a waning war, it is likely a major drive will not come until March, or April. Ordinarily the bitterest cold lasts through February and March.

The Russian air force has been raiding despite the weather, but not on the far north and on the middle eastern front might impel the Russians toward a face-saving smash on the Isthmus, original point of Russian penetration, or north of Lake Ladoga.

tions," a spokesman for the Congress said, "will be to request Chamberlain's assurance that appointment of Stanley to the war office will not mean a change of policy regarding pay, promotions and other army improvements carried through by Hore-Belisha.

"If these assurances are not available, the next logical step would be withdrawal of all our members of national regional committees connected with various aspects of the war."

Meanwhile the Daily Express, listing rumors which led up to dismissal of Hore-Belisha, stated the former war secretary favored Britain's former king, the Duke of Windsor, and was responsible for his appointment as a major general, "creating difficulties for the army staff in France."

Efforts were pressed, meanwhile, to force an early session of parliament to permit a full debate on the war secretaryship question. But observers believed that the government would be able to weather the political storm for the time being at least.

British 'Horse-Swap' Is Laid to Generals

Special Cable to Boston Evening American
LONDON, Jan. 8 (England has done the thing Abraham Lincoln refused to do when the United States was torn by internal war. England has swapped horses while crossing the stream.

England, engaged in war, has "accepted the resignation" of Leslie Hore-Belisha as secretary of state for war, and appointed Oliver Stanley in his place.

Why?
The London Daily Express unequivocally stated that Prime Minister Chamberlain was pressed to force Hore-Belisha to resign. The Express flatly stated:

GREATER WORLD WAR
"The generals were displeased with him. They objected to his drastic changes and reforms in face of opposition, which they say created resentment. So they made representations to the premier, who was unable to resist the pressure."

There is no question about resentment of the generals to Hore-Belisha—he practically renovated the British army in its dynamic program since he became war secretary. But is that all of the story?

Germany professes to see in the changing of Hore-Belisha for Stanley a change of British diplomatic policy. The German press attacks Stanley as "England's leading German-hater." Germany professes to see in Stanley's appointment a determination on the part of England to "expand the war both militarily and economic fields at the possible expense of neutral nations."

Germany charges that Stanley's program will include efforts to draw Norway, Sweden and Denmark into the war as allies of Finland, and Italy and the Balkans in as allies of France and Britain in that sector—evolving a "second world war against Germany and Russia."

Is that, if true, still all of the story?

RISE WITHOUT PARALLEL
Has the crucible of field service under war conditions, in British training camps and in the French war zone, evolved a failure on the part of Hore-Belisha's rapidly promoted "young men" that even the British public has not yet been allowed to find out about?

Hore-Belisha's meteoric rise in British politics—he is only 46—has been without precedent.

In 1937, Prime Minister Chamberlain appointed him to the war post, and he applied the Hore-Belisha technique to the age-old, "everything-by-precedent" and "everything by the rule book" British army.

He startled Britain by listing the inadequacies of Britain's national defense on land and in the air. He even pointed out things considered sacred with the British navy, though that was none of his official business.

He demanded re-armament, and Britain voted for it with a "whoop and a holler." He demanded stepping up of British arms production—British airplane production—and got it. Then he turned to the army itself.

He blasted at "aged and decrepit" army leadership. He protested

Blame Ouster on 'Lack of Tact'

LONDON, Jan. 8 (INS)—Tactlessness was the main reason for War Secretary Hore-Belisha's dismissal, the London Evening Standard stated flatly today.

Hore-Belisha rebuked a senior officer in the presence of a junior officer, the paper declared, arousing keen resentment in the higher ranks.

In addition, the Standard said, Hore-Belisha had differences of opinion with Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, chief of the Imperial General Staff, over the state of defenses of the British line in France.

against the system of selecting young officers by requiring their graduation from the British military schools—at a cost of several thousand dollars to their parents.

By cutting the retirement age he sent more than a score of high ranking British military leaders of the old school into the limbo of private life. He named young men compulsively—to key command posts.

WITHOUT LOSS OF A MAN
Transport of some 200,000 British troops to France without casualty was hailed by proponents of the new regime as an example of splendid accomplishment. It was, without question.

But, in France, all but suppressed reports were heard from time to time, of dissatisfaction, of seeming lack of training for mechanized warfare of enlisted men and young officers. Hore-Belisha went to France, inspecting troops in their field stations.

Somewhere in the tangled skeins of Britain's conduct of the war—military, economic, diplomatic—there is an answer to the question: Why was Hore-Belisha shelved?

But today, on the surface at least, the Daily Express solution will have to stand:

"The generals were displeased with him."

Nazis Bar Planes Going to Finns

BERLIN, Jan. 8 (INS) The German government definitely decided today to halt all transshipments of war supplies to belligerent countries through the Reich, with obvious emphasis on the case of Finland.

The decision ended all Italian aid to beleaguered Finland and a number of Italian bombing planes now at Sessnitz on the Baltic sea will be turned back to Italy.

The action was taken, an announcement said, in friendly agreement with Italy. International law was cited to show that a "neutral" power has the right to refuse transshipments to a third power. The Reich is holding to a policy of strict neutrality in the Russo-Finnish war.

BRITAIN DENIES U. S. SHIP DEMAND

By JAMES E. BROWN
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

LONDON, Jan. 8 The British government today stood on its right under international law to stop and search all foreign vessels for contraband, including those of the United States.

In answer to a sharp protest from Washington over stopping American vessels and a subsequent warning that Britain would be held responsible for any damage done to United States ships taken into combat zones, the foreign office declared American regulations in this respect were at variance with international law.

"It is within the British right to take American ships into contraband control ports such as Kirkwall," said an official spokesman.

"His majesty's government is replying to the United States note of Dec. 14, and is insistent upon its right to search ships under international law."

"There is clear instance that United States domestic law directly conflicts with recognized principles and rights of international law."

The spokesman declared the United States had laid down a "belligerent zone" (the North sea area), which Britain, under international law, does not recognize.

There fore, he declared, Britain will continue to take American ships suspected of carrying contraband into so-called "combat zones."

He said Britain was endeavoring to work out some manner in which the latter procedure can be eliminated. Britain does not want to halt American ships and will not do so if the "majority" regulations asserting that no contraband is carried, are complied with.

STORK RUINED HIS LOVE, SAYS WIFE

Testimony that one husband "raved and stormed" because his wife was going to become a mother, and that another pushed his infant son off a high chair was related in Middlesex probate court today as two wives won divorces.

In a third case, a husband won a decree after he testified his wife, whom he married on the 13th of a month, suddenly disappeared on the 13th of another month at a birthday party.

Vida Clough, a reading specialist for a publishing house, won freedom from Woodman W. Clough after she told Judge Arthur Beane her husband treated her so cruelly she lost 26 pounds during their married life.

WANTED NO BABIES

"He didn't want children, and when he found out I was going to have a baby, he raved and stormed and stormed," Mrs. Clough of Stoneham declared.

"I was peeling apples in the kitchen at the time, and when I asked him to throw away the peels for me, he threw the dish at me," she testified. Clough continually "hounded" her for use of her money "when he got ideas to go in business," she told the court.

"At various times he wanted to buy a farm, a greenhouse, and to start a rubber heel business," she said.

She said he imprisoned her in the bathroom when she once refused his demands for $3000.

Judge Beane granted her $16 a week for support of herself and two children, Walter, 13, and Margaret Ann, 7.

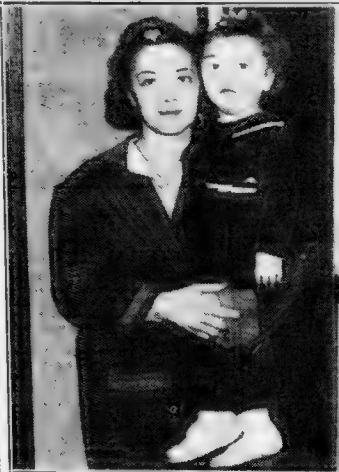

CLOUDS ON SUNSHINE

Frances Langill of Sunnyside st., Medford, told the court that Lloyd R. Langill came home intoxicated on one occasion "and knocked the baby over from his high chair."

Her mother, Mrs. Frank Jones, of Astoria, N. Y., testified her daughter was "bruised from head to foot" when she visited her New York home after leaving her husband.

John W. Schiel, 33, of Thorndike rd., Arlington, was unable to tell Judge Beane why his wife, Ruth, suddenly deserted him.

Schiel said they were married in Cambridge, Oct. 13, 1934, and that his wife vanished June 13, 1935. "We were at a birthday party that night," Schiel said. "I had to leave early because of my work. My wife said she'd come home later with her brother. I haven't heard from her since."

First birthday party of little Ann Palladino climaxed in a burst of smoke and flames as she was carried to safety when a $2000 blaze swept her Somerville home. Here, now, is Ann and her mother, Mrs. Frank Palladino... safe in the memory of one frenzied party.

BALL DUE TO HIT HIGH

This year's "Birthday Ball" will be record-breaking, according to Postmaster Peter F. Tague, director of the "Fights Against Infantile Paralysis" drive in Suffolk County.

"The occasion for funds to carry on the work is as great as ever and Boston is again called upon to stage a Birthday Ball at the Boston Garden on Monday evening, Jan. 29," said the postmaster.

President Roosevelt's birthday falls on Jan. 30, but as in some other years, the Boston Ball will be held on the eve. Mayor Tobin's honorary chairman, Governor Saltonstall, honorary state chairman, Headquarters will be opened at the corner of Tremont and School sts.

Skipper of Danish Ship Predicts Nazi Collapse

Prediction that the present war would result in complete collapse of the German empire was voiced today by genial, shrewd-spoken Capt. Mans Godfredsen of the Danish freighter Jessie Maersk.

Covered with ice as he moved slowly up ice-jammed Weymouth bay to the American Agricultural Chemical Co.'s docks, the Jessie Maersk was 23 days out of Antwerp. Capt. Godfredsen explained the Danish naval ministry, a none-too-happy neutral in this present conflict, had given orders that no statements were to be made by Danish seafaring men.

"We left Antwerp Dec. 16," the captain said, "and went into the Downs, where every out-going vessel must stop for British inspection. We arrived the 17th and left the 20th."

"We certainly weren't running blacked-out as English ships do. At night we even turned a searchlight on our flag on the aft mast. We didn't see any war, no destroyers, no wrecks, heard no distress calls."

"The only thing happened, a fireman drowned the cat—nine lives lost—and after that we had nothing but troubles, Galea, gales, gales. I never saw such weather." He went on to say that some members of his crew who had lived in Germany told him the citizens of that country were on rations even at the beginning of the war.

"Germany now is at the same point she was in 1917," he said. "Everyone thinks the war will be over this year, and that Germany will be done."

"Most people on the other side want America to come in right away and end it. They say America only wants to make money. And they feel if the war lasts longer than next year, America will be drawn in whether she wants to come or not."

Judge Benjamin Cook held Stevens in $2000 for the grand jury.

GOOD! NOW TONIGHT WHEN YOU GO HOME, JUST FOLLOW MY ADVICE AND TOMORROW YOU'LL BE A NEW PERSON.

NEXT DAY DO I FEEL GREAT TODAY? I'LL SAY I DO... EVEN THE MANAGER SAID I'D CHANGED... AND I OWE IT ALL TO YOU, DEAR...

NONSENSE, YOU OWE IT ALL TO CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go. The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest, it may just decay in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sick and the world looks punk. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name, 10¢ and 25¢. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

Unity's Friendship With Hitler Began With Cafe 'Pickup Date'

This is the first of a series of articles highlighting the bizarre adventures of the Hon. Unity Valkyrie Freeman-Mitford, Hitler's ardent admirer who has returned to her home in England suffering from a mysterious wound.

By EDWARD GOTTLIB

International News Service Staff Writer

After a strange career that sky-rocketed her to international fame as the Nazi "Goddess" of Adolf Hitler, Unity Valkyrie Freeman-Mitford now lies like a broken, discarded doll in her father's British mansion, her heart crushed by the mailed fist of the world's No. 1 dictator.

So great was Unity's devotion to the German Fuehrer and his Nazi political creed that this 25-year-old British beauty flung to the winds a family heritage that traced back to Charlemagne and her friends and relatives in England.

The word Valkyrie, which she proudly bore in her name, curiously symbolizes the now-shattered attraction between the English girl and the Fuehrer who used to call her his "Blonde Goddess."

In ancient Nordic mythology the Valkyries were pictured as divine, warlike maidens who served Odin, god of the Norsemen and "of battles and victories." Immortalized in an opera by Richard Wagner, they rode forth to battle, chose the heroic warriors among the dead and carried them off in their arms to Valhalla, the heavenly "Hall of the Slain."

POETIC ATTRACTION

Chancellor Hitler is a lover of opera, and the tempestuous music of Wagner's "Die Valkyrie" is one of his favorites.

During her many chats with the Fuehrer, Unity may have told him that her middle name was given her in honor of Wagner. She may also have confided that the old first Lord Riedel, her grandfather, had insisted that one of his grandchildren be given the name of the ancient German mythological "choosers of heroes."

Just as Lord Riedel became imbued with the idea of calling his granddaughter "Valkyrie," so Hitler is said to have been inspired by the Wagnerian epic to apply the term "ideal Nordic beauty" to his pro-Nazi British friend.

It may have been the same inspiration that brought Unity and Hitler together for the first time in a Munich restaurant in the autumn of 1934.

DRAWN BY BEAUTY

According to the web of truth and fiction which has long been spun about this memorable meeting, Hitler saw Unity and her sister, Diana, sipping coffee in a restaurant.

"Who are the two beautiful blonde women?" the Fuehrer inquired of his aides.

"They are two Englishwomen, but we understand they speak German fluently," he was told.

Then in the manner of what Americans call "pickups," Hitler was said to have sent his adjutant, Hellmut Bruckner, to invite the girls to his table. Unity and Diana, of course, were delighted and from that day until, perhaps, the outbreak of the European war, both were devoted admirers of the Chancellor.

NAZI ADHERENTS

Diana, who divorced Bryan Guinness of the British brewing clan, married Sir Oswald Mosley, leading English Fascist, filled her Belgrave square house with Nazi and Fascist emblems, and is even said to have trained her two sons by her first husband to greet visitors with the Nazi salute and cries of "Heil Hitler!"

After their coffee-house chat with the Fuehrer the girls were invited to dinners and parties of

If Your Ankles Swell You Can't Feel Well

Do your ankles swell, or are you tired and worn out a lot of the time with dark circles under your eyes? If so, the cause may be functional rather than organic or systemic kidney trouble. The kidneys work night and day cleaning and filtering excess acids, poisons and wastes from your blood. Because they never get a real rest it's easy to see that as you grow older the kidneys may get tired functionally and go down. Then excess acids and wastes may accumulate and poison your system. So if your ankles swell or you have to get up at night or suffer burning, scanty or frequent passages, backache or nervousness, or too-organic or non-systemic kidney or bladder trouble, you'll make no mistake in trying the prescription called "Cytex." It has been so successful in so high a percentage of such cases, Cytex is sold under a positive guarantee of money back, or return of empty package unless completely satisfactory to you. (Orders now come only 3c a dose at drugists and the guarantee protects you.)

Panic on Liner As Sub Attacks

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 8 (AP)—Passengers of the 14,172-ton British liner Highland Patriot told today of a two-hour battle with a German submarine shortly after the vessel left Las Palmas, Canary Islands, on its journey here.

They said the submarine fired two torpedoes, one of which passed perilously close to the bow and the other just as close to the stern.

When the submarine appeared the liner's crew manned her guns, which British officials described as defensive armament consisting of one four-inch gun mounted aft and one anti-aircraft gun. The crew fired on the submarine, when then submerged and disappeared.

The passengers said they were panic-stricken and ran pell mell about the ship, one being fatally injured in the crush.

The Highland Patriot is a Royal Mail Lines vessel running regularly between Liverpool and Buenos Aires.

Mite Winning Fight for Life

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 8 (INS)—Amazing scientists with her tenacious, though tiny, grip on life, 274-ounce Fern Kay Emerson, 13-day-old today, continued to thrive although given but a 1000-to-1 chance to survive.

The tiny infant, weighing 25 ounces at birth and born three months prematurely to Mrs. Eleanor Emerson, 34, of Holt, Mich., was not expected by physicians to live more than 36 hours. But the 13-inch long child, whose head is the size of a lemon and whose legs are hardly more than matchstick size, is still alive and growing in her oxygen-equipped, incubator home.

Mrs. Emerson has not yet seen her daughter, her first-born, and is excitedly waiting the tomorrow when she will catch her first glimpse of her offspring through the glass sides of the incubator.

all kinds staged by Hitler and other members of the Nazi hierarchy.

At one of these, in the Berlin home of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, their beaming host came to his feet, held out his glass and offered this toast: "I want to say that I believe Frau Goering, Frau Bryan Guinness and Fraeulien Unity Mitford the most beautiful women in Germany."

The effects of these compliments and other favors showered on the younger Miss Freeman-Mitford—She was only 21 then—were tremendous.

Unity followed Hitler from place to place, frequently staying as his guest in the Fuehrer's mountain estate at Berchtesgaden.

She seldom came to England, and when she did, there invariably was trouble of one sort or another.

The British haven't loved the Nazis. They hate them worse than ever now that war has sent thousands of British Tommies to the front and blacked out England's cities.

On at least one notable occasion Unity found out what that hatred meant—in terms of blood.

(The next article describes Miss Freeman-Mitford's complete capture by the tenets of Nazism.)

LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY

BRADSHAW Shoe, Leather Outlook Bright

Shoe and leather 1940 prospects are being viewed a bit more optimistically by observers outside the trade . . . Several industries . . .

trial analysts call the near term outlook favorable despite wage and pricing problems confronting manufacturers . . .

ONE ANALYSIS . . . Reports the trade rather confident the upward cycle will carry well into 1940 . . . Based on the rising trend of employment and payrolls in evidence . . . Further retail resistance to higher prices is diminishing as manufacturers stress cost increases . . . Wholesale quotations are up from a year ago on spring lines and Fitch Investors Service thinks further advances are in prospect . . . An early Easter is expected to sustain buying by jobbers and retailers over the weeks ahead . . . And we think the public is gradually coming to appreciate the excellent job retailers have turned in on cost control . . . And that they can not hope to delay indefinitely the pressure higher costs are exerting for price increases . . .

THE PROGRESS . . . Of industrial and financial indices from year to year is often a matter of much confusion . . . Public observers find themselves looking on trends through the medium of latest available news . . . With the result under or over emphasis distorts ideas, particularly during recovery periods . . . The two charts here today, reproduced with the permission of The First National Bank of Boston which prepared them, preserve past history . . . Thus enabling casual students to maintain a proper perspective of what is taking place . . . Without which future possibilities can not be evaluated . . .

RECOVERY . . . Possibilities from now on are generally considered from the standpoint of how much ground remains to be gained . . . Or twisted around how much of the room for improvement has been used up to date . . . The answer is obvious on the charts . . . There is plenty of room for gain since comparatively little has been used up . . . Employment and payrolls in Massachusetts are up 19 per cent from 1938 at their highs . . . But are still about 25 per cent under the 1923-25 average . . . Hides, wool and cotton are up from their lows . . . But certainly show no farcical inflation . . . And the wholesale commodity line, it should be noted, shows little variation in recent years, despite talk of stimulation . . .

CONTRAST . . . Often sheds the brightest light on market action . . . Any average can be used but since rails have been labelled—their think erroneously—the big disappointment we will use them in our study . . . The absolute failure of sellers to drive them lower from November 30 through December 30 has gone unnoticed . . . The group held in about a one and a quarter point range just above a critical downside level . . . Now after 6 sessions of rally, a one session top and a mere taste of reaction barishness is the vogue . . . Surely on the basis of the rally's failure . . . It just isn't logical . . . Rather is it a state of mind . . . For the top is so far overshadowed by the base constructed when the two are contrasted that logic can only favor the bull case . . .

NOTEBOOK . . . U. S. Steel almost always does upside tricks in the first months of a year in which further expansion of satisfactory production levels is to take place . . . Thus in both 1936 and 1937 when output was to rise above the good totals of the year previous poor rallies took place . . . In 1936 a start from the 46 level in December was followed by a rise to 72 plus in early April . . . And in 1937 an early December start at 75 culminated in a March high of 126 plus . . . There was a January slide in both instances . . . Industrially an market-wide current conditions provide interesting similarities.

ICC Warns Rails Of New Competition

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission told the nation's railroads today that they faced steadily increasing competition from other types of carriers . . . In its annual report to Congress, the ICC said that "remedial legislation such as it is possible" to evolve from the pending omnibus transportation bill "is desirable and should produce good results."

U. S. EXPORTS HIT BY WAR BLOCKADE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (INS)—American export trade is taking a drubbing at the hands of the allied naval blockades and the British-French ministries of economic warfare, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins has disclosed.

Stocks Turn Upward in Dull Trading

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (AP)—General improvement came into the stock market today after a somewhat hesitant start.

A few specialties exhibited strength and most leaders tacked on fractions to around a point. The comeback was on the slow side, however, with the ticker tape frequently idling near the fourth hour. "Gilt edge" issues bounded up a London. Securities were steady at Amsterdam and lower at Paris. Selective advances were scattered in the bond division. Commodities were uneven.

New 1939-40 highs were scored for American-Hawaiian Steamship, Studebaker and Loft. Brightening earnings expectations for Loft and Studebaker aided these stocks, while American-Hawaiian again was propped by the deal to sell several of the ships to the British.

Ahead at one time or another were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Woolworth, Douglas Aircraft, American Can, Westinghouse, duPont, Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak, Anaconda, Phelps Dodge, Western Union, American Telephone, N. Y. Central and Pennsylvania.

Hint N. Y. Exchange Loss $1,200,000

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (AP)—The New York Stock Exchange, one of the nations leading aggregations of business experts, was reported in well informed financial quarters today to have lost about $1,200,000 last year.

This, on Wall Street, was regarded as a pretty good record since in 1938, the exchange dropped $1,548,417. A staff of accountants is at work now on the official year-end report but it will not be ready for another month or so.

In a review of American foreign trade for 1939, Hopkins estimated the nation's excess of exports over imports for the year at $800,000,000. The excess was $1,100,000,000 in 1938.

Intensification of land and air combat may boost the volume but is unlikely to affect the relatively low prices of American goods and produce sold the allies, Hopkins said.

Shrinkage in volume became pronounced, he reported, after the opening of hostilities in September led the allies to cut off Germany's imports completely and cut their own imports of war nonessentials to conserve their funds for military supplies.

DETAILS FIGURES

With December statistics incomplete, Hopkins estimated United States exports for the 12 months will total about $3,100,000,000; imports, about $2,300,000,000.

Appraising this year's prospects, he said: "Fulfillment of the rather widespread expectations of a marked rise in export trade, which provided most of the basis for the business expansion of the fourth quarter of 1939—depends in large part upon the future course of the war."

"For the first three months, there has not been a significant increase in our export trade. If the character of the war changes, it is likely that this country will receive larger orders from the Allies. Surplus stocks and idle capacities militate against early price movements of any magnitude."

FARM PRODUCTS HIT

Farm products suffered the sharpest setback among general American exports "declining both absolutely and relatively throughout 1939," the Review revealed. Cellulose's demands for refined petroleum products after hostilities began served to offset earlier decreased shipments, Hopkins said. Japanese purchases largely accounted for an increase in exports of iron and steel scrap.

American merchandise imports increased during 1939, by comparison with 1938, particularly on such war essentials as nickel and alloys, crude rubber and tin. Raw silk, a Japanese product, advanced from $72,600,000 in 1938 to $107,000,000 in 1939.

Helen Hayes Arrives Jan. 22

With the coming week's blackout along the Hub's Rialto, local playgoers are eagerly awaiting Elmer Rice's Playwrights' production, "Two On A Island," due at the Wilbur Tater a week from tonight.

In the busy crowscoping Manhattan's lowlingments of glass and stone, he looked into faces that showevill but defeat and remaining learning hope. There are taxers and lunchroomtens, pascals and pascals, and he is the patch gifted to Melziner, has in 10 imaginative settings.

Heading the large are three popular young playesther Adler, Betty Field and Craven. Supporting them are McDonald, Martha Hodge, Fred and the longed-for, the dandies, Ann Thomas, Ma Ritt and many others.

Malko to Appear

Miss Hayes is co-starred with Philip Merivale in this comedy, the work of her husband, Charles MacArthur, and his "Front Page" collaborator, Ben Hecht.

The association of Miss Hayes and Merivale recalls their last appearance together here in "Mary of Scotland." More recently, Miss Hayes enjoyed a triumphant Boston engagement in "Victoria Regina."

"Boston After Dark," by George Holland, appears every day in the Boston American.

Modern Glamour Girls

By George Clarke

"... And some found glamour in a song ..."

By GEORGE W. CLARKE
THE glamour girl of today must be as sleek and trim as a racehorse, as stream-lined as the latest beauty of the Automobile Salons, as graceful as an airplane in flight ... but it wasn't always so.

Time was, and not in the too distant past, when glamour was on the robust side, as curve-some as a horse-chair sofa, and as comfortable ... and the stately beauties of the Black Crooks company shivered across many a stage, as famous in their day as Ziegfeld's glorified clammers were to become later, as full of "oomph" as Ann Sheridan, as sirenish as Lana Turner.

These were the days too, of Inverness capes, a bird and a bottle at Rector's, and a ride home through the park in a called the Adonis of his day, the handsomest man in the world.

Mary Garden was the sweetheart of Oscar Hammerstein's rival company, the Manhattan, and, later, the "directa" of the Chicago Opera company during the last of its glorious, diamond-studded days.

And Lina Cavalieri was the toast of Paris, star of the Paris Opera company, ex-wife of "sheff" Duby Chandler, Playboy No. 1 of the "Naughty Naughts," and later, the wife of Lucien Muratore, the great French tenor.

Each was as famous as Hedy Lamarr is now, and each, in a manner of speaking, hated the others with a deep, and abiding hate which enveloped all in an aura of splendid fury.

Garden had a kind of an edge in the race for popular favor. However, for, in Paris, she had been friendly with the great composers, and had created such roles as the market in "La Jodelle de Notre Dame," "Thais" in the Massenet opera, "Médée" in "Troïlus" and "Médée" and "Léonore" in the opera of that name.

BUT Paris did a "Carmen" which had the critics raving, and when it came time to create the title role in "Zaza," she was chosen for it ... and, besides, the Metropolitan had a Diamond Horseshoe, a tier of boxes graced by the proudest names, the richest people, the socially-elect of the country ... The Manhattan, on Thirty-fourth street, had to be good.

But the two of them were, the tenors of the town, and dwelled in luxury such as we poor mortals know nothing of—that is, since modernistic furniture became fashionable, and people started to live out of cans from the corner delicatessen ... for those were the days of terrapin, and wild duck, and venison—items seldom mentioned nowadays ... and "Diamond Jim" Brady was sewing diamonds like wild cats along the Great White Way.

And opera, in those days, was a rich man's plaything, with Otto H. Kahn the principal patron of the Metropolitan, and with Harold F. McCormick and his then wife, Edith Rockefeller McCormick, supporting the Chicago company, which Garden later headed ... And Kahn put up half a million a year, the McCormicks same.

And, still later, when the McCormicks quit in Chicago, the job was taken over by the late Samuel Insull, the utilities tycoon, then one of the richest men in the country who, later, fled to Greece in disgrace, a broken RIVALS—"Those were the days of ... a bird and a bottle at Rector's ... man ... He died in Paris, finally, after returning for trial and an acquittal, and when he died he was penniless ...

And, besides, Mary did a pretty snappy "Carmen" herself but with an authentic tippy dance in it ... and she did "Salome" the Oscar Straus opera fashioned from the Oscar Wilde poem, and got arrested for doing it.

They were about even-Stephen when the bomb burst about them. Hammerstein had signed Lina Cavalieri to sing with the Manhattan.

La Garden went to him in cold fury. So, he would bring this French woman to New York, would he? Well, she would go on strike! Worse, she would tie him up in the courts to prevent anyone but herself from appearing in all of the choice roles in the French operas, the only ones Cavalieri could sing!

Cavalieri arrived in America, reported for duty, stayed out the season—and never sang a note!

SO she went back to Paris, and Garden went to Chicago at the request of Mrs. Archibald Freer, who had paid for her education, and the feud died out.

It flared up again, however, years later when Muratore was a member of the Chicago Company of which La Garden was the "directa," the boss, the works.

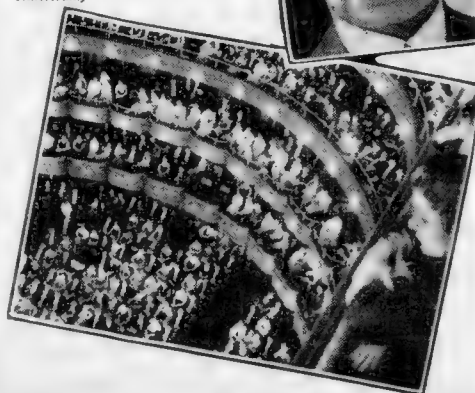

There was, it appears, a pretty robust tenor by the name of Charles Marshall, and, upon occasion, he was assigned to the role of Samson in "Samson and Delilah," a Muratore role. He sang it, all right, but the great French tenor retired, sulking to his hotel apartment. That role, he said, was his alone. He conceded that when he sang it, he had to go to bed for a week, but nevertheless, he and she was going to sing it.

And the wise chuckled, remembering that it just so that La Garden had treated La Cavalieri ... and that now La Cavalieri was none other than Mrs. Muratore!

Those days are gone forever, and will probably never be duplicated. La Cavalieri is living quietly on the Riviera with her husband, now retired. Farrar is on a farm in Connecticut, a buxom, placid farmwife. The Garden is in Hollywood, teaching youngsters how to sing ... Those days are gone, but as the cycle rolls around, the time may come again when glamour girls will be big, strong, voluptuous, and, maybe—

They will all be singers ... who knows?

(Tomorrow the story of Jean Harlow ... The tragic life of one of Hollywood's first and greatest glamour girls, the platinum blonde, who changed the hair color of half the nation ... Read tomorrow's Evening American.)

hansom cab ... Necking was called "sparkling," and it was "23-skidoo!" for an unwelcome suitor.

Opera was an institution then, and the three great glamour girls of the music dramas were Mary Garden, Geroldine Farrar and that vixen from overseas, the darkly beautiful Lina Cavalieri.

Now it would take the genius of a James Gibbons Huncker, the Walter Winchell of his time, to really tell the story of the rivalry between these three big, strong, beautiful women—and there is no such talent, or knowledge here ... If this account seems inadequate, forgive it.

"Gertrude" Farrar, daughter of an old time baseball player, was the darling of the Metropolitan Opera troupe ... and it was whispered of her that once she had received the attentions of royalty, the orchids of Friedrich, of Prussia, Crown Prince of Germany, son of Kaiser William II, the war lord of 1914 ... and she was the wife, later, of Lou Tellegen, leading man for Sarah Bernhardt, and "TOMORROW'S HOME will be built from the products of the field, for chemistry is outstripping nature," says Dr. O. R. Sweeney, head of the Engineering Department at Iowa State College.

This statement, made a few days ago in Amarillo, Tex., should interest New England.

We have the factories, skilled labor and climate that efficient, Twentieth Century industry requires.

When the magic of the laboratory transforms milk into cloth, corn cobs into boards and wheat straw into paper, we ought to be the section of the country that will do the work.

It is unfortunate that too little attention is being paid to the possibilities of chemistry.

We know that rayon, an unknown product two decades ago, has become a major industry, operating 479 factories, employing

AN ATTRACTIVE "DREAM HOUSE OF TOMORROW"
Let New England Factories Supply Construction Material

120,860 workers and paying them wages which total $110,000,000 each year.

We should know that development of other products will provide thousands of jobs and millions of dollars for other workers.

BOSTON'S BID for the Republican National Convention next June is going to be considered by the party leaders when they meet a few weeks hence to select the parley site.

G. O. P. Chairman John Hamilton makes that assurance in a letter addressed to former City Councillor Robert Gardiner Wilson, Jr.

We hope the Republicans will regard Boston favorably.

Not only will they find members of their party occupying the gubernatorial chairs of all New England States, but also they will be in pleasant company.

No less than 30 of the country's major organizations, including the American Legion, the American Hospital Association, the International Congress of Mathematicians and the Institute of Radio Engineers, are holding their national conventions here this year.

Our New England hospitality and superior climate are conducive to thought and wise decisions.

AN EASY WAY to create employment and to extend to others the benefits of returning prosperity is to eat more "sweets."

From the New England Manufacturing Confectioners' Association we learn that if every person in the United States ate one more piece of candy a day during 1940, the industry would automatically expand a third beyond its present size.

In Massachusetts the reward for eating this additional piece of candy would be exceedingly worth while.

Instead of employing approximately 6200 men and women, candy makers would be able to give work to at least 8000.

And the annual payroll would rise from five million dollars to six million.

Best of all, the persons who did eat more candy would be helping themselves as much as they helped their neighbors.

Candy is a valuable food, rich in vitamins and very often necessary to good health.

A FORWARD STEP in crime prevention is the appointment of Dr. Alan R. Moritz, professor of legal medicine at Harvard University, to the post of expert assistant in charge of pathology in the State Department of Public Safety.

It marks the first time in the history of Massachusetts that the advice of a consulting pathologist has been made available to medical examiners without cost.

It gives the Commonwealth's law enforcement agencies the invaluable assistance of highly trained experts and a fully equipped laboratory, now in the process of construction at Harvard Medical School.

And it serves notice on would-be criminals that they will have to match wits with some of the State's most brilliant minds when and if they commit acts of violence.

Human Side of News

By EDWIN C. HILL

DR. CHAIM Weizmann got Palestine for a Jewish homeland in a trade with the British Empire. His bargaining ace was some chemical legerdemain by which he stabilized jittery cordite, ended its premature explosions and helped win the war for the Allies. Dark, intense, tireless, he sinks his life in rebuilding Palestine.

He now arrives in New York as President of the Jewish Agency for Palestine.

Pierre van Passen's current best-selling book, "Days of Our Years" includes a moving and, at times, tragic review of the brave Palestine adventure, caught in a sanguinary Sargasso Sea of international power politics.

Dr. Weizmann has been through it all, as homes, industries, vineyards and groves are laboriously, and sometimes dangerously, nurtured in the desert—where, in the prophecy of Isaiah, "Men shall build houses and live in them."

The sponsors of his current visit describe it as "part of a mobilization of resources to speed the rebuilding of the Jewish homeland in Palestine, to increase the capacity of the Holy Land to absorb thousands of refugees."

THE PLIGHT of vast multitudes of homeless, starving Jews in Europe is both the most appalling story of our times.

Palestine is both the symbol and the substance of their salvation. It is not a desolate land of impoverished soil. The development of agriculture, particularly citrus fruit, with scientific farming, has been a demonstration of what applied intelligence can do in using living resources.

REFUGEES CLEAR FIELD IN PROMISED LAND
"Both the Symbol and Substance of Their Salvation"

There is abundant evidence to prove that, with protection against the Arabs, and with humane and friendly co-operation from what remains of the civilized world, Palestine could provide new life and hope for vast numbers of the fugitives from the Nazi tyranny.

DR. WEIZMANN has been occupied for more than 25 years with both chemical and political instability. He toiled up through the ghetto of Pinsk, Russia, and studied at the Universities of Darmstadt and Berlin.

When the World War began, he was an instructor in chemistry at the University of Manchester, Eng. Disastrous explosions of cordite were killing British soldiers and causing official alarm. Numerous attempts to tame it all were ineffective.

That resourceful little Welshman, David Lloyd George, finally searched out the obscure instructor in chemistry. Dr. Weizmann pondered the problem and found hope of a solution if he got certain necessary aid.

This aid, oddly enough, required a trip to Terre Haute, Ind. Lloyd George eagerly arranged the trip and there Dr. Weizmann found the necessary 13 tons of corn for one ton of stabilizer. He roped and hog-tied the cordite. He had produced acetone.

"What do you want for this service?" Lloyd George asked him when he returned to England. "Palestine," said Dr. Weizmann. "You shall have it," said Lloyd George. Thereafter came the Balfour Mandate and the Jewish Homeland, with England's still continuing obligation to guard it against the murderous forays of the desert tribes.

MY DAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—Friday night we held the judicial reception, and it was one of the smallest of the year. It was good to see the Chief Justice in such good health and spirits. He told me that he had begun to read Carl Sandburg's four volumes on Lincoln and found them as fascinating as any fiction.

I had set my volumes aside, thinking that I could not possibly begin reading them until Summer, but I think I shall take the first volume and put it by my bed in the hope that by reading a little at a time every night, I may find that I get through considerable reading.

WE SAT around in the President's study and talked after the reception was over. We had three guests who are Hudson River neighbors staying in the house—Judge John Mack of Poughkeepsie, and Mr. and Mrs. Lydig Hoist of Staatsburgh.

It amused me to see two story tellers vie with each other, for the President would tell a story which would remind the Judge of a story. I think they would have kept on all night! They really make a grand team as story tellers.

CHIEF JUSTICE HUGHES
"In Good Health and Spirits"

I had a delightful lunch with Mrs. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and had several appointments for the weekend.

However, on the whole, these days are comparatively free, which is unusual at this season of the year.

Some of the family are returning. John and Anna were back for Sunday, and Ethel was here after a session with the dentist.

I feel a little like a railroad junction at times when the family begins to come and go, but even a railroad junction has its advantages, for one can snafish hours here and there with people while they linger between trains.

FOR NEW YEAR'S I received two delightful gifts of poems. Miss Hilda Smith sent me some of her own verses and one of them, from a poem called, "Frontiers of Freedom," I must quote to you:

"Misty the road, but secure the foundation

"Laid by those others who blazed the first trail.

"Let us rebuild now our pioneer Nation

"Where living freedom for all shall prevail."

A nice thought to carry with us through 1940.

Another friend sent me: "The True Ballad of the Glorious Harriet Tubmann" by Sarah N. Cleghorn. It should be read aloud, for it gives a wonderful picture of a time which I am thankful to say is past for all of us in this country.

MRS. WALLACE ORR AIDS BRITISH

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Mrs. Wallace Orr, who wore the $1 million-dollar Jonker diamond for three days while she considered buying it, decided against the purchase and has returned the jewel. . . . The diamond next week will be displayed for sale in a showcase at the Colony. . . . Mrs. Orr, who is one of the fabulous MacMartins of Canada, felt that such a purchase would, in these days, subject her to criticism. And, so, instead, she's devoting that money to buying planes and establishing a hospital for the British.

SCHOOL DEPT.—Andre Kostelanetz and Lily Pons, who toured the cafes, visited the Versailles, where they watched Joe E. Lewis entertain. . . . Lewis' face still bears the criss-cross scars he received when the late "Machine-Gun" Jack McGurn knifed him during the night-club warfare in Chicago when Capone ruled the Loop. . . . "Those scars?" asked Miss Pons. "From Heidelberg?" . . . "Yes," Lewis assured. "Heidelberg—in Cook County, Illinois."

MOVIES DEPT.—When Mayor La Guardia went to California last year he wanted to see Jascha Heifetz, who then was making "They Shall Have Music" for Sam Goldwyn. . . . Goldwyn refused to permit any visitors on the set—not even the Mayor of the City of New York. . . . Yesterday, as the guest of honor for the New York Movie Critics Circle, it was La Guardia's job to present the Critics Award for "Wuthering Heights" to the producer of that picture, Sam Goldwyn.

BOOK DEPT.—The British censors refused to send a cable dispatched by Major Robert Henriques a cable to Farrar and Rinehart, the publishers, which read: "Good Luck No Arms" . . . The cable finally was approved when the censors were assured that the message did not refer to British war supplies but to the publication of Henriques' book, "No Arms, No Armour," which won the All Nations Prize novel contest. . . . Major Henriques is stationed in London, where army life is so dull that he's written 50,000 words of a new book, to be called "Return From Arms."

FINANCE DEPT.—David O. Selznick, producer of "Gone With the Wind," and Jack Whitney, his angel, are rumored to be going their separate ways. . . . Selznick has formed the "Oliver Jeffery Corp." Oliver is Selznick's middle name; Jeffery is his son's name. The only officers listed are Selznick, his wife, Irene, and Dan O'Shea—who is Dave's personal accountant.

LILY PONS

MONDAY MORNING MUSINGS: The Democrats may have made an error in failing to arrange for an address by former Lieut. Gov. Kelly in tonight's expensive ceremonies honoring Andrew Jackson and the party. . . . Frankie is most effective in a martyr's role. . . . His appeal as the poor boy who was good to his mother and younger sisters and brothers was so irresistible that he trounced Leverett Saltonstall. . . . Francis H., if he happens to harbor a grievance, can erupt without notice and upset carefully laid party plans.

BUT DISREGARDING anything except plain justice, the Dorchester politician was an early and forceful mover toward harmony in Democratic ranks, and many credit him with the idea (adopted) of forming a committee of seven to help and advise the state chairman, William J. Burke. . . . It is unlikely that Mr. Kelly would have chosen tonight's affair as an appropriate occasion to announce his candidacy for the governorship. . . . It would not have been seemly, nor ethical. . . . Nor, for that matter, smart.

HOWEVER, YOU MAY expect an announcement from the former lieutenant governor, and a candidate for the top job in the last primaries. . . . Your reporter predicts that Mr. Kelly will be a candidate for governor again, this year. . . . He was the first to toss his fedora in the ring in 1938. . . . I think it will be the same this year, unless Atty.-Gen. Paul A. Dever confirms the accepted assurance of his candidacy and comes to bat with an early, formal declaration of intentions.

THE "MOUSETRAP" IS NOT A RECENT development in football, Huntington R. (Tack) Hardwick revealed between gasps as he thawed out after a deep-sea fishing trip off Chatham. . . . Tack remembers that a Groton master, Professor Guy Ayrault, instructed his charges in the niceties of "mousetrapping" opposing guards when he was coaching the Groton gentlemen about 30 years ago. . . . And Professor-Coach Ayrault had a name for the trick. . . . He called it (and remembering that this was Groton, here's the snapper in the story) the "psychological play."

OH, IF YOU'RE interested in a little deep-sea fishing at this time of year, Tack's party had considerable success. . . . Without needing an ice-breaker to precede their vessel, the boys brought back a boatload of cod—about 700 pounds of cod. . . . They used two lines and baited 400 hooks on each. . . . Innumerable skate were tossed back, and only one pollock and one haddock broke the monotony of hauling in codfish after cod. (Massachusetts, there she stands!)

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: From time to time, the column has regaled you (we hope) with instances in which the film companies have made drastic changes in the titles of scheduled pictures. . . . Frequently the new title seemed entirely foreign to the original. . . . Comes a title change which so completely disdains the

DICK POWELL, BRIDE WILL CO-STAR

By Louella O. Parsons

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 8. At last Dick Powell has his heart's desire a role in which he won't sing a note—in Paramount's "I Want a Divorce." And to add to the perfect setup, none other than his bride, Jean Blondell, is the co-star. Para bought this title from the radio show of the same name but there will be absolutely no connection between the air show and the original script being whipped into shape by studio writers, except the name, of course. Offhand I can't think of a more incongruous title for a picture starring Joan and Dick than "I Want a Divorce" for they are one of the happiest couples in Hollywood.

I've never known anyone to stick to his story, that he didn't want to do any more musicals, more thoroughly than Dick. He's been off the screen a long time now and all because he flatly refused to do musicals offered him at Universal, 20th Century-Fox and Republic in "I Want a Divorce." Dick will play a young divorce lawyer who loses his own wife in spite of knowing all the answers.

A LINE OR TWO: When Will Rogers was alive he loved to go with Fred Stone to the Theater Mart and sing and laugh with the crowd at "The Drunkard." Since the passing of his beloved crony, Fred hasn't attended the show until the other night when he came with Mrs. Stone, Dorothy, and Mrs. Will Rogers.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD AND CHICAGO: Bill Powell's wedding gift to the bride, Diana Lewis, was a beautiful matching ruby set, consisting of a ring, pin and clips; Tom Brown is Helen Mack's latest escort; Leo McCarey visited the RKO lot for the first time since his accident when he took his nurse to see the rushes of "My Favorite Wife," Saturday; Kay Francis dining with Fritz Lang, who used to be one of Marlene Dietrich's devoted escorts; Chicago is filled with so many grand memories for me.

CONSTANCE BENNETT opened last night and am going to try to get over to see her play between shows; John Barrymore said adieu to Chicago after his spectacular run here. Am wondering if he will do his famous ad lib act in New York after he opens there; Dorothy Lamour heading for her old home town, New Orleans, and the Mardi Gras the minute she finishes "Dance With the Devil"; Clark Gable and Carole Lombard leave Hollywood Wednesday for that long postponed New York jaunt.

TWO-MINUTE STORY

"TELL YOU, Jim, don't do it!" The voice on the telephone was beseeching. "Let racketeers OWN the city, but keep out of that grand jury inquiry or Rocky's mob will silence you permanently."

But the young man calling was firm. "I'm sorry, but I've got to go through with my promise to expose these rats. I'm fighting not only for all the honest lawyers like myself who can't make a living here, but for the innocent victims of Rocky's gang—and that means everyone in town!"

Jim's brother wailed, and then said, "I know you mean well, Jim, but I'm afraid your mission will be impossible." "Impossible!" Jim blazed. "What do you mean?"

"Every terminal is being watched. The gang will never let you out of the city—that is, alive." Then he hung up.

JIM FROWNED. Well, he was going—nothing could change that—but how? Auto and plane were no good. A train? Then a smile lit up his boyish face, and he snapped his fingers.

Three hours later, he entered the terminal, small suitcase in hand. He was perspiring, and it seemed that everyone he passed stared at him. No wonder, thought Jim!

But he kept doggedly on towards his track. Then, from the corner of his eye he saw them—Rockey's hoodlums, five of them, with their right hands jammed into overcoat pockets.

Then they hadn't forgotten the depot! Legs trembling slightly, Jim walked past. But the men saw him, their snake-like eyes staring in amazement at his audacity.

Jim moved on, expecting the burning sting of a bullet to drop him to the concrete.

He knew they would use silence, and that he would never hear the bullet that killed him.

JIM REACHED his compartment and dropped with exhaustion into the seat. He drew out his handkerchief, and, as he mopped his forehead, the whistle blew and the train moved.

Quickly, he jumped up and removed the canary-yellow coat and purple trousers he had been wearing.

Safe now, safe to do his job well! For who would notice a man's face when he was wearing such an outfit!

LISTEN, WORLD! By Elsie Robinson

I'VE NO USE for goodness that never takes chances. Right Guys who never run risks give me a pain in my neck.

Real righteousness is a chancey proposition—and never common or popular. The reason's plain. For goodness runs contrary to comfort and safety—and, generally speaking, raises Cain with both.

Righteousness isn't a natural impulse. Our ancestral Grammas and Gramps weren't born hoping for harps and halos. They were born high-tailing it from malice and meanness. They lived in constant peril, their one constant concern being for their own safety. As a consequence, they were selfish, cruel, dishonest, cowardly . . . and again! all virtues which exposed them to danger.

FOR EXAMPLE, take honesty. Honesty is obviously an artificial and dangerous attitude, acquired with much difficulty . . . and practiced at your own peril. Then along you come and tell folks to be brave. So what happens?

Plenty happens! Forthwith you expose up the average citizen and smash his cute, comfortable design-for-living to smithereens.

Is he not obliged to you? Yes; he is N-O-T. To the contrary, he hates you forever after, and devotes 'his remaining years to getting even with you!

Then there's courage. Courage is probably the rarest virtue on earth—and most destructive. It smashes through our mortal alibis just as honesty does—and exposes our false fronts.

In short, courage is especially Public Enemy No. 1 . . . and the pest who advocates it is shunned by all who see him coming.

It's perfectly ducky to read about The Boy Who Stood On The Burning Deck—but just try and be one and see how far you get!

ALL OF WHICH brings me down to my first statement—namely, goodness is both rare and risky and no game for those who won't take chances. Any hero who's worth his salt pays plenty for the privilege. He doesn't just sit around acting nice and keeping out of jail. He battles, not only the villainess of human nature in general, but his own weakness in particular.

GOODNESS STAKES ALL IT HAS ON FIGHTING DECENCY. GOODNESS RISKS ALL IT HOPES ON ONE BRIGHT GLEAM OF TRUTH. GOODNESS TAKES CHANCES. . . . LAUGHS. . . . REGARDLESS OF THE COST!

And those who don't, says I, aren't worth their rayon wings!

Terse Plea Voices Mother's War Hate

Mrs. E. V. Abbott of 55 Cottage st., Amherst, wrote only six lines of comment with her pledge card in joining the National League of Mothers, but into them she packed a significant plea to keep America's sons out of the European war:

Between those six lines there was the unspoken grief and anxiety of a mother for her only son, dragging through the weeks and months of the World War.

"I had an only son in the last war," writes Mrs. Abbott, "and though he came back, he has never been as well. Do those he fought for care? They surely do not, nor has he ever had any government help."

Mrs. Marie A. Bonmartino, 77 Lyman ave., Medford, "I pledge myself 100 per cent to the Legion of Mothers. My only son I shall be happy to give for my country, but NEVER for foreign countries."

Mrs. Mabel M. Dickinson, 41 Rutland sq., Boston:

"I sure want to join any movement that will keep our sons with us. I have one boy and I need him and I hope God will spare him for me. Without my children life would not be worth living. God bless and protect all the young men of America."

Mrs. Leonard Gredhill, 25 Burbank st., Boston:

"Let us fight the best possible fight to keep our husbands, sons and brothers from crossing the water to fight other nations' wars. Let us also do our utmost to keep war from coming to America. Let us keep our trust in God to stop this hatred of one another and to promote brotherly love instead."

Mrs. Alice Malinart, 257 Broadway, Chelsea:

"I am the mother of a soldier son. He is only 19 and has already served a year and has two more years to go. I am proud of him and his army service. If the so-called 'big shots' want war, let them fight it out between themselves. In that way the blood of our American soldier boys will not be spilled on foreign soil. They belong at home, where they were born under the Red, White and Blue. I hope and pray my boy will never have to take the life of the son of any other mother."

COLLEGE BOY KILLS IN HOLDUP

CLEVELAND, Jan. 8 (AP)—A youthful robber shot an American District Telegraph Co. guard to death early today in the Western Union Telegraph Co. main office here.

The youth, who said he was a University of Pittsburgh senior, was critically injured.

The guard, Theodore Nichols, 34, of West Richfield, O., died several hours after the gun fight. Police Sergeant Anthony Luciano, who fired several shots at a man running from the office, said the youth told him his name was John McCormick, 21, Pittsburgh.

"My mother had been trying to get me to quit college, and I was getting tired of studying anyway. I figured this would be an easy way to make money," Luciano quoted him.

Al Capone Quits Hospital

BALTIMORE, Jan. 8 (AP)—Scarface Al Capone left his hospital bed today and moved into a house here, still facing a long siege of medical treatment for the lingering brain malady he contracted in prison.

His physician, Dr. Joseph E. Moore, announced the ex-gang chieftain's departure, and said at the same time it was "too early" to tell whether Capone would benefit from his hospitalization.

You Can Be Beautiful

Nail Polish Protectors

By ARLINE GOULD

Life just wouldn't be half as sweet if the beauty magicians didn't keep right on turning out things that are honest miracles... that do a different job with ease and eclat.

What would toenail-daubers do without a little rubber gadget that separates each toe, and sees to it that the polish doesn't smear on the next little pig?

How could we live without a brush lipstick that gives us Hollywood mouths, and feeds itself the bright pigment automatically like a fountain pen?

And the newest trick is on hand... no pun intended... it's a set of "polish shields" which are to be slipped over each fingernail while the polish is drying. There'll be no marring of the bright surface, each nail will shine like a polished mirror.

A set costs a dollar and you can use them practically forever. Think of the joy! You can smoke a cigarette without hating it as though it were TNT, you don't have to flutter your hands helplessly in mid-air for minutes at a time.

And while we're on the subject of beautifying hands you should know about a special sale on a very fine hand cream. If you use a lot of it, as you should, you know what an expensive item it can be. So invest in a half-pound jar for $1 and forget about chapped hands for the rest of the winter.

If you'd like to learn about the "polish shields" or the grand special sale on hand cream, phone Arline Gould, L1Berty 4000, weekdays until 5:30, or write, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

LONELY BUT NICE

A Complete Short Story
Daily on This Page

By CLARE
WHITNEY

ANGELO was lonely. He knew he ought to consider himself very fortunate and he was. He had a good home with his sister, Alice and the bambino. He had a steady job. He had youth, and health, and strength—in fact he had everything.

That is, everything except happiness. He was unutterably lonely. When he walked in the park on Sundays everyone else had somebody with him. They were all in pairs, or in groups.

When he went to the movies, the people ahead of him in line were buying two tickets, and inside they were looking for seats for two.

It seemed to Angelo that he was the only person in all the world that was all alone.

There were plenty of girls in the office where Angelo worked who would have been glad to go out with him. It wasn't every girl that could boast of such a clean-cut, fine-looking young man with a good job.

Angelo always wore sparkling fresh shirts that Alice had laundered for him, with matching handkerchiefs and tie; and up-to-the-minute suits with perky lapels and severely creased trousers.

He had that freshly scrubbed look. Perhaps it was his clear dark skin against the white collar—or maybe it was the way his hair bristled up from his forehead—"like a sink-brush," was the way Mabel had described it.

HIS OWN SECRET

Mabel was the only one of the girls in the office who had made a play for Angelo. They all had tried in their own way, but Angelo remained unscathed.

They decided he was stuck-up, or already married, or a woman-hater, and all sorts of things that Angelo was not.

They never guessed that Angelo was very lonely—and very bashful.

Mabel didn't know it, but she worried Angelo no little. She was little and cute and blonde. There was something about the way her heels clicked, and the way her curls fell in heavy clumps against her cheek and the back of her neck, that started Angelo's pulse racing every time she passed his desk on her way to the water cooler.

The one bright interlude in Angelo's week was the evening Alice held her sewing club. Six or eight of Alice's girl friends—young matrons, like herself, came for the evening with their sewing and knitting—sometimes bringing their

ALICE and the bambino.

MARIE, a member of Alice's Sewing Club.

Alice made no answering comment. She leaned over and handed the bambino a fresh piece of swab-bach to replace the one he had thrown on the floor.

Angelo wasn't lonely any more now. He always had Wednesday nights to look forward to and to plan for. Marie seemed to understand him. He told her all about himself—about his being bashful with girls—about the girls in the office—about Mabel with the tripping heels and bewitching curls. Marie always listened interested-

But then Marie never talked much about herself.

She just sat and knitted and encouraged Angelo to his.

Several times Angelo had been on the point of asking her about her home life, but dared not break the spell. Things were wonderful the way they were. Why spoil everything by asking questions?

It was not until the fall and winter had passed, and the trees in the park had begun to show green shoots, and people were beginning to worry about which way to turn the clock for daylight-saving time, did Angelo again become sad.

The tiny payment took shape. It was a sock. A small white sock. A baby's sock.

"For your bambino, eh?" he gulped, trying hard, but utterly failing to make the question sound casual.

"Eggs my bambino?" she repeated, her black eyes dancing in merriment. "Since when is it proper for young unmarried ladies to knit socks for their bambinos?" "Then you're not married, you have no one—I mean—" Angelo was suddenly overtaken by one of his bashful spells, and couldn't utter another word.

"For your Bambino, eh?" he gulped, trying hard, but utterly failing to make the question sound casual.

babies if they had no one to leave them with.

Angelo felt perfectly at home with married women. He felt that they weren't expecting anything of him, except maybe to amuse the baby, or to hold the yarn, or to help serve the refreshments—little homely things that he was accustomed to do for Alice.

He was quite a favorite in the club. He felt as though he were one of them.

A DIFFERENT GIRL

One night there was a new member in the Sewing Club. Whether Alice had planned it on purpose or it had happened, Angelo never knew. When he had inquired of Alice at breakfast the next morning who the new girl was, she had just said, "You mean Marie Farrell?" She is a new tenant—just moved in the first of October—I met her on the roof the other day when I was taking in the wash. I thought she might be lonely, so I asked her over.

"She's nice," said Angelo simply.

to, smiling once in a while, showing her strong white teeth. Marie was lovely when she smiled!

She seemed different from Alice's other friends—in her dress, in her manners, in every way.

The other girls wore doiled-up things—silk dresses with trimmings, and clips, and beads, and patent leather pumps with toes out.

Marie looked more like a school-girl. She wore sweaters and tweeds and low-heeled shoes with flapping tongues.

The other girls had tight marcelled Marie's dark locks looked wind-blown. Her face was brown, even the backs of her hands were brown. Angelo noticed, as she was winding the yarn he was holding for her.

As time went on, and their friendship became a habit, Angelo began to wonder what her husband was like—he didn't want to think about it—and whether she had any children—she had never mentioned anything about her family to Angelo.

Soon the club would suspend for the summer, and then there would be no more evenings with Marie.

Angelo sat on the footstool at Marie's feet, after the yarn was all wound, and watched her start a chain of stitches that would grow, under the manipulation of Marie's deft fingers, into a new garment—perhaps for her husband, or for her bambino—did she have a bambino?

HIS ONLY FRIEND

Angelo hoped she hadn't—not that it was any business of his, but he just couldn't stand it if she had.

In silence he watched the garment taking shape, trying meanwhile to get a grip on himself. He mustn't feel this way, about a married woman—about any woman.

Of course, she had a right to have a baby and to knit socks for it. He must pull himself together—for her sake.

Marie was his friend—the only real friend he had—he must not lose her friendship.

"No one but you," she said. "But the socks!" Angelo asked, still unable to believe in his good fortune.

"The golf links will be open soon, and the sock is for my new driver," she said. "I am afraid it will have to last for a long time," she added. "For from now on all my knitting will be for you—and for your bambino."

The Strange and Powerful Story of a Woman Who Wouldn't Stay Dead!

REBECCA

To permit Boston Evening American readers to share in one of the literary treats of a decade, we reprint today Chapter 1 of "Rebecca" from the Daily Record.

CHAPTER I

LAST night I dreamt I went to Manderley again. It seemed to me I stood by the iron gate leading to the drive, and for a while I could not enter for the way was barred to me. There was a padlock and a chain upon the gate. I called in my dream to the lodge-keeper, and had no answer, and peering closer through the rusted spokes of the gate I saw that the lodge was uninhabited.

No smoke came from the chimney, and the little lattice window gaped forlorn. Then, like all dreamers, I was possessed of a sudden with supernatural powers and passed like a spirit through the barrier before me. The drive wound away in front of me, twisting and turning as it had always done, but as I advanced I was aware that a change had come upon it; it was narrow and unkept, not the drive that we had known.

At first I was puzzled and did not understand, and it was only when I bent my head to avoid the low swinging branch of a tree that I realized what had happened. Nature had come into her own again and, little by little, in her stealthy, insidious way had encroached upon the drive with long, tenacious fingers. The woods, always a menace in the past, had triumphed in the end.

They crowded, dark and uncontrolled, to the borders of the drive. The beeches with white, naked limbs leant close to one another, their branches intermingled in a strange embrace, making a vault above my head like the archway of a church.

Wilderness

And there were other trees as well, trees that I did not recognize, squat oaks and tortured elms that straggled cheek by jowl with the beeches, and had thrust themselves out of the quiet earth, along with monster shrubs and plants, none of which I remembered.

The drive was a ribbon now, a thread of its former self, with gravel surface gone, and choked with grass and moss. The trees had thrown out low branches, making an impediment to progress; the gnarled roots looked like skeleton claws. Scattered here and again amongst this jungle growth I would recognise shrubs that had been landmarks in our time, things of culture and of grace, hydrangeas whose blue heads had been famous. No hand had checked their progress, and they had gone native now, rearing to monster height without a bloom, black and ugly as the nameless parasites that grew beside them.

On and on, now east now west, wound the poor thread that once had been our drive. Sometimes I thought it lost, but it appeared again, beneath a fallen tree perhaps, or straggling on the other side of a muddled ditch created by the winter rains. I had not thought the way so long. Surely the miles had multiplied, even as the trees had done, and this path led but to a labyrinth, some choked wilderness, and not to the house at all. I came upon it suddenly; the approach masked by the unnatural growth of a vast shrub that spread in all directions, and I stood, my heart thumping in my breast, the strange prick of tears behind my eyes.

Then, like all dreamers, I was possessed of a sudden with supernatural powers and passed like a spirit through the barrier before me.

There was Manderley, our Manderley, secretive and silent as it had always been, the grey stone shining in the moonlight of my dream, the mullioned windows reflecting the green lawns and the terrace. Time could not wreck the perfect symmetry of those walls, nor the site itself, a jewel in the hollow of a hand.

The terrace sloped to the lawns, and the lawns stretched to the sea, and turning I could see the sheet of silver, placid under the moon, like a lake undisturbed by wind or storm. No waves would come to ruffle this dream water, and no bulk of cloud, wind-driven from the west, obscure the clarity of this pale sky.

I turned again to the house, and though it stood inviolate, untouched, as though we ourselves had left but yesterday, I saw that the garden had obeyed the jungle law, even as the woods had done. The rhododendrons stood 50 feet high, twisted and ent-circled with bracken, and they had entered into alien marriage with a host of nameless shrubs, poor, bastard things that clung about their roots as though conscious of their spurious origin.

A lilac had mated with a copper beech, and to bind them yet more closely to one another the malevolent ivy, always an enemy to grace, had thrown her tendrils about the pair and made them prisoners. Ivy held prior place in this lost garden, the long strands crept across the lawns, and soon would encroach upon the house itself.

There was another plant, too, some half-breed from the woods, whose seed had been scattered long ago beneath the trees and then forgotten, and now, marching in unison with the ivy, thrust its ugly form like a giant rhubarb towards the soft grass where the daffodils had blown.

Nettles were everywhere, the van-guard of the army. They choked the terrace, they sprawled about the paths, they leant, vulgar and lanky, against the very windows of the house.

They made indifferent sentinels, for in many places their ranks had been broken by the rhubarb plant, and they lay with crumpled heads and listless stems, making a pathway for the rabbits. I left the drive and went on to the terrace, for the nettles were no barrier to me, a dreamer, I walked enchanted, and nothing held me back.

Desolate Shell

Moonlight can play odd tricks upon the fancy, even upon a dreamer's fancy. As I stood there, hushed and still, I could swear that the house was not an empty shell, but lived and breathed as it had lived before.

Light came from the windows, the curtains blew softly in the night air and there, in the library, the door would stand half open as we had left it, with my handkerchief on the table beside the bowl of autumn roses.

The room would bear witness to our presence. The little heap of library books marked ready to return, and the discarded copy of The Times. Ash-trays, with the stub of a cigarette; cushions, with the imprint of our heads upon them, lolled in the chairs; the charred embers of our log fire still smouldering against the morning. And Jasper, dear Jasper, with his soulful eyes and great, sagging jaw, would be stretched upon the floor, his tail a hump when he heard his master's footsteps.

A cloud, hitherto unseen, came upon the moon, and hovered an instant like a dark hand before a face. The illusion went with it and the lights in the windows were extinguished. I looked upon a desolate shell, soulless at last, unhaunted, with no whisper of the past about its staring walls.

The house was a sepulchre, our fear and suffering lay buried in the ruins. There would be no resurrection. When I thought of Manderley in my waking hours I would not be bitter. I should think of it as it might have been, could I have lived there without fear.

I should remember the rose-garden in summer, and the birds that sang at dawn. Tea under the chestnut tree, and the murmur of the sea coming up to us from the lawns below.

I would think of the blown lilac, and the Happy Valley. These things were permanent, they could not be dissolved. They were memories that cannot hurt. All this I resolved in my dream, while the clouds lay across the face of the moon, for like most sleepers I knew that I dreamed.

In reality I lay many hundred miles away in an alien land, and would wake, before many seconds had passed, in the bare little hotel bedroom, comforting in its very lack of atmosphere. I would sigh a moment, stretch myself and turn, and opening my eyes, be bewildered at that glittering sun, that hard, clean sky, so different from the soft moonlight of my dream.

The day would lie before us both, long no doubt, and uneventful but fraught with a certain stillness, a dear tranquillity we had not known before. We would not talk of Manderley, I would not tell my dream. For Manderley was ours no longer, Manderley was no more.

We can never go back again, that much is certain. The past is still too close to us. The things we have tried to forget and put behind us would stir again, and that sense of fear, of furtive unrest, struggling at length to blind, unreasoning panic—now mercifully stilled, thank God—might in some manner unforeseen become a living companion, as it had been before.

He is a wonderful patient and never complains, not even when he remembers . . . which happens, I think, rather more often than he would have me know.

I can tell by the way he will look lost and puzzled suddenly, all expression dying away from his dear face as though swept clean by an unseen hand, and in its place a mask will form, a sculptured thing, formal, and cold beautiful still but lifeless. He will look to smoking cigarette after cigarette, not bothering to extinguish them, and the glowing stubs will lie around on the ground like petals.

He will talk quickly and eagerly about nothing at all, snatching at any subject as a panacea to pain. I believe there is a theory that men and women emerge finer and stronger after suffering, and that to advance in this or any world we must endure ordeal by fire. This we have done in full measure, ironic though it seems.

We have both known fear, and loneliness, and very great distress. I suppose sooner or later in the life of everyone comes a moment of trial. We all of us have our particular devil who rides us and torments us and we must give battle 'in the end. We have conquered ours, or so we believe.

The devil does not ride us any more. We have come through our crisis, not unscathed of course. His premonition of disaster was correct from the beginning; and like a ranting actress in an indifferent play, I might say that we have paid for freedom. But I have had enough melodrama in this life, and would willingly give my five senses if they could ensure us our present peace and security.

Happiness is not a possession to be prized; it is a quality of thought, a state of mind. Of course we have our moments of depression; but there are other moments too, when "time, unmeasured by the clock, runs on into eternity and, catching his smile, I know we are together, we march in unison, no clash of thought or of opinion makes a barrier between us.

We have no secrets now from one another. All things are shared. Granted, that our little hotel is dull, and the food indifferent, and that day after day rains very much like rain, yet we would not have it otherwise. We should meet too many of the people he knows in any of the big hotels.

We both appreciate simplicity, and if we are sometimes bored—well, boredom is a pleasing antidote to fear. We live very much by routine, and I—I have developed a genius for reading aloud. The only time I have known him show impatience is when the postman lags, for it means we must wait another day before the arrival of our English mail.

We have tried wireless, but the noise is such an irritant, and we prefer to store up our excitement; the result of a cricket match played many days ago means much to us.

One of the best matches that have come up from annals, the boxing bouts, even the billiard scores. Finals of schoolboy sports, dog racing, strange little competitions in the remotest corners, all these are grist to our hungry mind.

Sometimes old copies of the "Field" come my way, and I am transported from this indifferent island to the realities of an English spring. I read of chalk streams, of the mayfly, of sorrel growing in green meadows, of rooks circling above the woods as they used to do at Manderley.

The smell of wet earth comes to me from those thumbed and tattered pages, the sour tang of moorland peat, the feel of soggy moss scattered white in places by a heron's droppings.

Once there was an article on wood pigeons, and as I read it aloud it seemed to me that once again I was in the deep woods at Manderley, with pigeons fluttering about my head, I heard their soft, complacent call, so comfortable and cool on a hot summer's afternoon, and there would be no disturbing of their peace until Jasper came loping through the undergrowth to find me, his damp muzzle questing the ground.

Like old ladies caught at their abolutions, the pigeons would flutter from their hiding-places, shocked into silly agitation, and, making a monstrous to do with their wings, streak away from us above the tree-tops, and so out of sight and sound.

When they were gone a new silence would come upon the place, and I—uneasy for no known reason—would realise that the sun was long gone, a pattern on the rustling leaves, that the branches had grown darker, the shadows longer; and back at the house there would be fresh raspberries for tea. I would rise from my bed of bracken then, shaking the feathery dust of last year's leaves from my skirt and whisking to Jasper, set off towards the house, despising myself even as I walked for my hurrying feet, my one swift glance behind.

How strange that an article on wood pigeons could so recall the past and make me falter as I read aloud. It was the grey look on his face that made me stop abruptly, and turn the pages until I found a paragraph on cricket, very practical and dull—Middlesex batting on a dry wicket at the Oval and piling up unimpeachable records.

How I blessed those stolid, flannelled figures, for in a few minutes his face had settled back into repose, the color had returned, and he was deriding the Surrey bowling in healthy irritation.

We were saved a retreat into the past, and I had learnt my lesson. Read English news, yes, and English sport, politics and compositely, but in future keep the things that hurt to myself alone. They can be my secret indulgence. Color and scent and sound, rain and the lapping of water, even the mistle of autumn and the smell of the flood tide, these are memories of Manderley that will not be denied. Some people have a way of reading Bradshaw. They plan innumerable journeys across country for the fun of linking up impossible connections.

My hobby is less tedious, if as strange. I am a mine of information on the English country-side. I know the name of every owner of every British moor, yes—and their tenants too. I know how many grouse are killed, how many partridge, how many head of deer. I know where trout are rising, and where the salmon leap. I attend all meets, I follow every run. Even the names of those who walk bound puppies are familiar to me. The state of the crops, the price of fat cattle, the mysterious ailments of swine, I relish them all.

A poor pastime, perhaps, and not a very intellectual one, but I breathe the air of England as I read, and can face this glittering sky with greater courage.

The scrubby vineyards and the crumbling stones become things of no account, for if I wish I can give rein to my imagination, and pick foxgloves and pale campons from a wet, streaking hedge. Copyright, Daphne du Maurier Browning. Published by Doubleday, Doran & Garden City Pub. Co.

Cap'n Quits Sea For Snug Harbor

As soon as he told us his affairs here, Capt. Christian Michelsen, 72, of Strathmore, Brookline, veteran coastwise pilot between Boston and New York, will retire to Snug Harbor, sailor's home on Staten Island, N. Y., he said today.

There, after 58 years of following the sea, he will join his old cronies and end his days by the sea, at a point where he can watch the heavy shipping traffic in and out of the port of New York. Captain Michelsen, the son of a sea captain, was born in Denmark and went to sea as a boy.

He became an American citizen, receiving his pilot's papers in 1905. He became a coastwise pilot in 1926.

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

Written Expressly for King Features Syndicate, Inc. Distributed by International News Service

Our old man said lazy men never got the credit to which they were entitled in this world. He said that whenever anybody spoke of a man as lazy, it was always as if he were guilty of a crime, whereas the truth of the matter was the lazy man was a benefactor of the human race.

He said lazy men, or at least the requirements of lazy men were responsible for most of the mechanical advancement of civilization. He said they were always thinking up things that would assist them in their laziness, or inspiring others to tinker up these things for them.

He said lazy men had discovered great scientific truths while just laying around doing a little off-hand thinking, like the time Sir Isaac Newton discovered the law of gravitation while lying on his back and seeing an apple fall.

He said lazy men should have credit for some of our best American statesmanship. He said politicians were usually just lazy men who got themselves elected to the United States Senate or Congress and then they became statesmen, evolving excellent laws out of their very laziness, which gave them time to think.

Our old man's guess was that 90 per cent of mankind were born lazy and that given their choice they would do no work whatever but would lead lives of leisure and luxury.

Our old man said he guessed he was one of the laziest men that ever lived. He said it was true he worked every day but that it was only because he constantly felt the spur of hunger and that even when he worked there was always in the back of his mind the vague hope that something would happen that would enable him to knock off for good and just lazy around.

Our old man said his grand father was a hound for work and had once said to him, go to the ant thou sluggard; consider her ways and be wise. Our old man said he craved the meaning of the painstakingly diligent and took up a study of ants but that they struck him as doing a lot of futile running, never seeming to have any fun.

He said he dismissed them as a possible source of inspiration and turned to a bear that he met up with when he went West. He said this bear used to sleep all winter long not doing a lick of work in that period and in the summer would mow about the wildwood, as lazy as you please, but always showing himself.

It would find plenty of food without too much effort. Sometimes it would locate a bee tree and knock off the bees' store of honey. Our old man said he thought it was rather foolish that these busy bees had to work like blue blazes half a year to accumulate that honey and that in five minutes the big, busy bees would eat it all up. He decided the bear seemed to have the best idea.

AUSTEN LAKE

Sonja vs Bess?
Nugget vs Note

scoops up 50 per cent of the gross gate, or about $75,000. Why?

Now in my eye both are vivid creatures of equal dash, professional poise and muscular flourish. Both are devoid of that sophisticated, cosmetic style of beauty which is usually associated with barnstorming lady athletes. And both are persons whose ballet work could be forgotten and be gazed upon for their physical sakes. For though Bess does not fit Sonja's Dutch doll standard of female architecture, her upholstery is no less soothing to the eye and she is not much less, if any, in graceful co-ordination of her shanks.

So what then, makes Sonja a pure-financial nugget, from the tip of her suede toes to the crest of her coppery crown? And what leaves Bess a promissory note, unsecured by collateral?

Charm School and Duck Pond

MAKE NO MISTAKE! SONJA IS A LOVELY bundle from whatever angle viewed. Mistress of the muscular arts, she drops into Christmas calendar attitudes which are rhythms of rounded line—the tilted chin (she is too short-faced for classical standards), the hitch of her hips (verging in excess of the Hollywood ideal), the fluid silhouette from shoulder to wrist (no gent should examine a lady so!) . . . Well she's for the eyes to look at, ain't she?

The charm school beatitudes were afforded Sonja from babyhood, a career scheduled by parental ambition—the parlor graces and habitual affectations which in time become true parts of personality. But Bess Ehrhardt was picked off a Madison, Wis., duck pond where the ice forms in early November and lasts until May. She was lifted to stardom at a single blow. She came from the average small town background, where she got a B in her skinned knees and fought with the neighborhood brats. Three years ago, at 19, she joined the Shiptad show as premier ice-ballerina. But Sonja, since the age of 4, has been a constant scholar in her parents' school, carefully cultured in the five feminine charms—voice, vivacity, hygiene, boudoir-gloss and social delicacy.

Bess went straight from High School to become a paid performer. She had been skating for fun and was surprised to find that people were anxious to pay to watch the frolic. Hers was a rubbery grace that came from hereditary health and outdoor youth and only since last year have the layers of artificial overlay brought professional glaze. But now she is a commercial trouper who, with some 40 odd other girls receives a proportionate wage, but not so much as to fail to feel scandalized that Sonja averages $30000 a performance. But why not? Sonja draws it!

Repetition Makes Reputation

THE ANSWER BETWEEN THE TWO GIRLS is their difference in reputation—a reputation which built the Henie name through repetitious printings in the world press, seasons of guided campaigns, a life devoted to technical perfection, the cultivation of useful town background, her arrival at Hollywood. For today at 26, Sonja is No. 1 boxoffice, with nearly a million dollars in the bank, a peerage from the Norwegian King and the world's most eligible, but cautious, blonde.

I wonder whether, with the same infant training and artificial manipulations, Bess Ehrhardt might not have carved a career of riches and fame equal to Sonja's. Though to be sure Bess was born American and hence would have been subject to jealous discriminations in Europe's ice rink.

Bess started as a nobody from nowhere. But until Sonja turned professional four years ago she had toured the world, living amply on the cuff and unable to afford earlier professionalism because she was then living beyond the pro scale as a vocational amateur. Ten times lady skate champion of the world, thrice No. 1 Olympic singles and artiste to the tips of her rose-tinted nails. Paris modistes haunted her door with satin cuffs. Rink promoters inspired her by cable. Spotlight in London, music in Vienna, the Swiss Alps in deep winter, the Bois de Boulogne in April, the Lido in July. But as yet she has, in her own accent, "No Lofe Life." Men were just blurred pusses seen swiftly in passing—a succession of chins, eyes and noses.

At least if Bess is short on riches which goes with being fortune's favorite and a million-dollar girl, she has "lofe life," having married her boss, Roy Shiptad. She also has youth, health and whizz and a reputation coming in thin, gradual coatings. The tomorrows of her life are beginning to beckon. But she will always be imitation to La Henie. Sonja was the original copyright owner. Without her there would have been no skate carnival furor, no box-office demand, and hence no barnstorming career for Bess Ehrhardt. Render unto Sonja, therefore, the things which are Sonja's.

B. C. Seniors Favor
Captain Each Game

Coach Frank Leahy was on hand at Boston College this afternoon to supervise election of the 1940 football captain. It promised to be an unusual election because 35 men were eligible to vote for the seven junior regulars and nine other junior candidates.

ALL-SCHOLASTIC FETE
HEADS SCHOOL SLATE

Eleven schoolboy gridders, choice of the Boston Evening American-Daily Record Board of Coaches for official All-Scholastic honors this past fall, will receive gold footballs Wednesday night in the highlight of a week chock full of sports activity.

These charms will be presented to the All Stars and the Board of Coaches at a banquet Wednesday evening at the Hotel Lenox.

The Board, made up of prominent members of the coaching ranks will also receive footballs. This group includes Fred Osterberg, Arlington; Harry Downes, Brookline; Bill Broderick, Salem; Jim Mansfield, Haverhill; Ed "Skip" Sherlock, Hyde Park and Bill Ohrenberger, Boston English.

AWARDS FOR "ALL" AGES

Invitations have been sent to the eleven boys picked on the first team who will receive the gold charms, emblematic of their choice on the official All-Scholastic team for 1939.

They are Bill Kilrane, Brookline; Joe King, Boston English; John Firey, Medford; Weldon Osborne, Salem; Bob Barney, Brockton; Ed Tobin, Arlington; Bill Harvey, Everett; Bernie Lanoue, Brockton; John Callaghy, Lawrence; Bob Mangene, Malden and Ronald Siney, B. C. High.

Guest speakers, to be announced later, will provide an interesting evening for the boys.

Thursday, the Boston Conference starts the hockey wars at the Arena with a four-game session,

It was possible that the election would see an innovation in B. C. elections because the seniors on the squad favored the idea of electing a captain before each game.

The coaches said they have their supporters among the underclassmen. They are electing a single leader from the present squad and a captain from the next class.

If a captain is elected, it is likely that he will be a member of the team. The first stringers who had and had all season, namely the Muzzys of Medford, (George) King of Lawrence, (John) Gorman of Haverhill, (Cliff) Johnson of Boston, (Gene) Goodrich of Haverhill, (Harry) Goudy of Lawrence, (Harry) O'Rourke of Malden and (Charles) O'Rourke of Malden.

Alex Lefebvre of Haverhill, CT, the lad who kicked 15 on College's first points in the Cotton Bowl and Lou McSpaden of Brockton, and (Bobby) Carter of "Carmax" (Brockton) during 1939 were also suggested as being included in a list of possibilities.

Manila Champ

MANILA, Jan. 8 (AP)—American boxer climbed to top today in the Philippine title fight tournament, Hated "Big" McSpaden, Arlington, Mass., capturing the title with a 2-7 for the 12 boxes and Emily Zanderman, Portland, Ore., scoring 2-4 for second round.

McSpaden, board constant golf to finish one rounder put. The Japanese star 1 Miyamoto, shot a 202.

Postpone Naming
Track Stockholders

Publication of the names of stockholders in horse and dog tracks was delayed today when Secy. Lawrence Lane of the state racing commission said he had not yet received the opinion of Atty.-Gen. Paul A. DeLoe.

Lane said that when he received the opinion he would send it by air mail to Miami, Fla., where Chairman F. Connors of the commission is located. The other two members, Elmer Nelson and Harold G. Allen, are on their way to the southern resort now.

Lane said he would wait for orders from the commission and dog tracks before making public the names of stockholders in tracks seeking Massachusetts racing dates.

HEIGHT OF JAM—Johnny Fitzgerald, No. 6, of Boston Junior Olympics, and Ernie Garron, No. 15, rush to aid of Larry Cousins, hidden in pile, as latter mixed it up with Larry Sniffen of New York Brokers in last period.

COUSINS DOWN—Fitzie doesn't appear in this picture, because to went to Garron's aid when latter got engaged in a brawl with Larry Sharest. Here Cousins is down, and Bill Robinson, No. 3, of Cambridge, is trying to dig him out of pile. "Ref," at right, was kayoed a moment later FITZIE AGAIN—Scene in a second period when Johnny Fitz was helped off ice by Boston trainer, Eddie Aronson, after Fitz was hit with high stick. But he wasn't out long. You should have seen him travel in last period brawl.

KID PICS BRAWL IN N. Y. WIN

Boston's Junior Olympics, emulating the fast pace being set by their senior brothers in the Provincial League, were back in town today boasting a 7-5 victory over the Exchange Brokers of the New York Metropolitan amateur league.

The game was played in Madison Sq. Garden as part of a double-header, in which the New York Rovers and the Atlantic City Seagulls met in the other half.

15,000 SEE GAMES
A Sunday gathering of 15,000 witnessed the dual bill.

The Junior O's spurred into a 2-0 lead early in the game and were never headed.

In the second period the Boston kids dazzled the near capacity crowd with four successive goals to run up a 5-1 margin.

In the final period, when the New York team was staging a heated rally, an argument broke out between Johnny Fitzgerald, Boston rightwing, and Harry Sniffen of the Exchange Brokers.

NEWTON HIGH BOY
It developed into one of the busiest free-for-alls seen on Madison Square ice in years, with the entire squads of both clubs taking part.

After several unsuccessful efforts the officials managed to clear the ice, but not before one of them had his eye decorated.

Fitzgerald graduated from Newton High in '37 and has been with the Junior Olympics since graduation.

He must be able to handle himself, because he returned to Boston today bearing no marks of the encounter.

Davis Signs
Bucc Contract

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 8 (AP)—Catcher Virgil (Spud) Davis, initial player obtained by Manager Frankie Frisch when he started rebuilding the Pittsburgh baseball Pirates last fall, has signed his first Pittsburgh contract, the Pirate management reported today.

Davis was bought from the Phils to add punch to the weak-biting pirate catching staff, which last year failed to produce better than a .235 batter. Davis batted .307 for the Phils and ranked 14th among the 22 National League sluggers who hit .300 or better.

Heafner Sets Pace In Coast Open Golf

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 8 (AP)—Handicapped by stormy showers, husky Clayton Heafner of Linville N. C., continued to set the pace in the annual Los Angeles open shooting a 73 for a 54-hole score of 212.

Heafner played his round in drizzles and occasional downpours, but the later arrivals, including E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, amateur Wilford Wehrle, Jimmy Hines and a few others, waded through the last six holes in an incipient cloudburst.

BESS EHRHARDT
America's Ice Queen

The most alluring performer in the "Ice Follies of 1940" which will be presented at the Garden starting Jan. 15, is the glamorous and talented Bess Ehrhardt, "America's Sweetheart of the Ice."

Bess' rise to the top is unequalled in the history of the skating world. In the "Ice Follies of 1940" the beautiful Miss Ehrhardt presents several notable routines.

In her pair act with Roy Shiplad, Miss Ehrhardt presents a group of modern dances.

WINS SKATING HONORS

ROME, N. Y., Jan. 8 (AP)—Although he won but one race, Tommy Smith of Utica combined sufficient second and third places to capture senior honors in today's holding of the Central New York speed skating championships.

BIG FIELD IN SILVER SKATES

A large field of ice speedsters already was a certainty today for the Silver Skates Derby to be staged by the Boston Evening American-Record at the Garden on Sunday, Feb. 4.

With the best early season skating in years giving the racers ample opportunity to train for the colorful tests, many have sent their entries, and others have sent word their entries will be in the mail shortly.

While the entries do not close until Tuesday, Jan. 30, it is well for racers to get their entries in well before this date, to avoid the last minute rush.

There is plenty of room for everyone, however, and no one should hesitate to enter because of lack of experience, or fear that the fields will be large for comfort.

Fields in each racing heat will be restricted to a reasonable size, to give all an equal opportunity to win one of the valuable awards.

There are only a few rules regarding entries, all of which are detailed in the entry blank printed at the lower corner of this page.

The important ones are these: Any resident of New England may enter, in the appropriate class for his or her age, who is an amateur skater. The only entrants who must register are the seniors over 18 years, who must register with Wm. C. Hill, Secretary N. E. Skating Association, Inc., 321 Auburndale ave., Auburndale, Mass. Registration fee is 25 cents.

B. C. Gridmen Guests At Bowl Film Show

Head Coach Frank Leahy, athletic director John Curley, managers, trainers, and the B. C. football squad numbering around 50 men will be the guests of division manager Harry McDonald at Keith Memorial this evening when the theater celebrates Boston College Night, chief feature of which will be the showing of the Pathe News Special of the Boston College-Clemson game.

These action-pictures of the B. C.-Clemson intersectional game are most complete movies, and were made under special arrangements between Pathe News and Mr. McDonald. The films cover every detail in connection with this important game.

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

I AM NOW ABLE to let you in on the secret Dave Wilson confided to me in his recent letter from Miami, Fla. Beginning next Monday there will be placed on sale in Boston and throughout New England "Dave Wilson's Winners." It will be a special code book, and will also contain a list of "Wake-Up" horses, and other live racing news.

Each day in the Boston Evening American, and also in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, Wilson will pick five horses that will be tied in with "Dave Wilson's Winners." The selections will be made on horses running at Tropical Park, Fair Grounds, Santa Anita and at Havana. Later, when other tracks open they will receive consideration from Wilson and the latter's expert clockers.

"Dave Wilson's Winners" will be issued on Monday of each week, and will sell for 15 cents a copy.

This new code book will not conflict in any way with the Dave Wilson graded handicaps now appearing in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser. The graded handicaps, and Dave's best bet at Tropical Park or at whatever other track he is making his handicaps will continue as usual.

Wilson has been secretly preparing "Dave Wilson's Winners" since the racing season closed in New England at Narragansett Park. He has been securing special information from horsemen and persons close to the racing game, and is ready to hand this fund of knowledge along to his thousands of followers.

Picked Cardinals to Win at $31

IT IS AMAZING the feats Wilson has been able to accomplish in picking winners. Ever since he first came to New England from Maryland Dave has led all rival New England handicappers. Last season in Florida, Wilson topped every handicapper in the United States.

Last Saturday at Tropical Park Wilson's selections in the Boston Evening American named Cardinals to win the big race. Dave had special information that Cardinals had been carefully trained for the five and a half furlongs dash, and that he would take the honors by his ability to make a stout-hearted finish.

There was a big bundle of Boston money on Remarkable in this race. Remarkable was the second betting choice, but when the numbers went up the race went to Cardinals with $31 for a $2 ticket, while Remarkable was out of the money.

One big Boston bettor who wagered $200 on Remarkable placed a $20 "saver" on Cardinals on account of the fact the latter horse was picked to win by Wilson. As a result the bettor received a payoff of $310.

Modest Queen won at $9.70 while El Puma, another Wilson selection, paid $7.40 to win.

Wilson also picked the daily double of Orient Express and High Finance on Saturday for its payoff of $22.40.

Dave has been "hot" at Tropical Park.

DAVE WILSON'S agents are at all major race tracks. They are perched along the rail during the early morning workouts. They attend the races in the afternoon, while at night they sit around in the cafes, restaurants, hotels and night spots with the horsemen. They then send their private information to Wilson.

"Dave Wilson's Winners" will be jammed with special information.

With a copy of "Dave Wilson's Winners," you check with the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser for the day's code. You then come up with the Wilson horse, and you may be sure the selection has been made after careful study.

"Dave Wilson's Winners" is expected to prove a sensation. It will fill a popular need and give the fans the kind of racing information they desire.

Wilson Dreams About the Thoroughbreds

WHEN DAVE WILSON talks about a thoroughbred, there is a tone of deep affection in his voice. Dave is more interested in the horse as a splendid animal than he is in him as a part of the legalized betting game.

"I enjoy the breeding farms better than the race tracks," Wilson once told me. "I like to see thoroughbreds roaming through green pastures, and the colts when they are at play. Betting is a necessary part of horse racing, but we should not concern ourselves too much with it. The horse as a fine animal is entitled to first place in our thoughts."

I received a wire from Wilson today in which he stated he is making the last minute investigation of the charts and his racing tabs to select the "Wake-Up" horses for the first issue of "Dave Wilson's Winners."

The five special code horses will be picked for the day they race. Wilson will not make his choices until just before press time each day so that he will be able to get latest track conditions, jockey changes and other last minute information.

This will make 30 code horses a week, five for each racing day. The "Wake-Up" horses, which may win at juicy prices, will be additional features. There will also be race track gossip.

I would suggest that you tell your newsdealer to be sure to save you your copy of "Dave Wilson's Winners." The booklet will be on sale next Monday throughout Boston and New England.

Callahan Duels Gilmore to Open Hot Fight Week

By RINGSIDE

This will be the busy week for boxers in New England rings.

Andy Callahan of Lawrence and Frankie Gilmore of Fall River will open hostilities when they clash in a ten-round bout at the Casino in Fall River tonight. Callahan, now under the management of Arthur Flynn of Lawrence, who was a former middleweight boxer, will enter the ring a favorite. Gilmore has plenty of boxing and hitting ability, and hopes to upset the heavy-thumping Callahan.

Eddie Mack's Argonne A. A. will bob back into the fight picture at Mechanics Building on Thursday night when it stages another fighting show.

GUGGINO FIGHTS JUNIOR

Carl "Red" Guggino of Hartford has been matched to meet Paul Junior of Hartford in one of the ten rounders. In the other ten, George Salamone of East Boston will collide with Poison Ivy of Hartford.

Guggino and Paul Junior recently engaged in a spirited ten-round draw at New Britain. Junior twice settled Lou Ambers at the Boston Garden.

Salamone knocked out Jerry Zullo of Chelsea at the Argonne A. A. last week, and is confident he will also upset Poison Ivy.

Ivy was christened Robert De-mauro, Sebastian. He is 19 years of age and was born of Italian parents. Ivy has won 40 bouts in a row, and his supporters will back him to win over Salamone.

CHMIELEWSKI TRIES AGAIN

At Worcester on Friday night the heavy hitting Henry Chmielewski, Polish middleweight, will try to dispose of Lou Brouillard of Worcester. In their last meeting in Worcester, Brouillard won a close decision after a sensational battle.

Chmielewski had Brouillard on the floor in the early stages of the bout. Lou finished fast to catch the eyes of the judges and referee.

Since the Brouillard tussle Chmielewski has beaten Howell King in Worcester. Chmielewski got up off the floor to punch out a win over King who is an exceptionally shifty boxer and solid hitter.

Giants-Indians Spring Tour Set

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (INS)—The New York Giants and Cleveland Indians, who have traveled enough miles together to circle the globe in the past six years, will embark on a 16-game caravan through eight states next March, according to the local National League's exhibition schedule announced today.

CHELSEA BOY TRIES PURE RING COMEBACK

The second trial tournament in the state amateur boxing championships will be staged tonight at the Arena with 44 boxers competing.

The tournament is being staged under Irish-American A. A. auspices, in conjunction with the N. E. A. A. U.

Foremost among the entries to-night will be the veteran Mickey Pancerzyk of Chelsea, who is making a comeback in the 135-pound division after a year's layoff.

Four hours of battling are promised from the group which includes the following:

Tommy Hill, Haverhill; Harold Santos, Boston; Joe Castro, Boston; Tommy Luckmann, Brockton; Orlando Fant, Lynn, and Tony Kosta, Taunton, 112.

Eugene Morris, Natick; Paul Trehan, Cambridge; Joe Connolly, Dorchester; Frank Pecoraro, Westmouth; Harold Harris, Malden; Eddie Dutra, Taunton; Joseph Diannano, Cambridge; Earl Parent, Alston; Frank Topazio, Hyde Park; and Melvin Hunt, 126.

William Connolly, Roxbury; Edward Hackett, Waltham; George Puxley, Springfield; Frank Heria, Taunton; Tom Hill, Lowell, 160. Phil Weinberg, Chelsea; Joe Peters, Waltham; Kenneth Jason, Cohasset, and Matty Connolly, heavyweight.

Dizzy's Woe Bores Cubs

CHICAGO, Jan. 8 (INS)—Chicago Cub officials evidenced no interest whatever in cries of agony emanating from Pitcher Dizzy Dean at Dallas, Tex., whose proposed salary for 1940 has been cut from $20,000 to $10,000 by the club.

Neither could Cub officials be interested in Dean's statement that he expects to cure his lame pitching arm by having a wisdom tooth extracted. The official attitude was:

"We haven't heard anything directly from Dean yet. We'll worry about it when we do."

Thomas Ring Quiz Put Off Again

CHICAGO, Jan. 8 (INS)—Records in the case of Harry Thomas, heavyweight fighter who stated he participated in faked bouts with Max Schmeling and Tony Galento, have been shelved until a Jan. 22nd hearing.

8-4-7-1 BILLY CONN IN DRIVE TO 175-B. CLASS

By LAWTON CARVER

International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (INS)—They have mapped out Billy Conn's future to the point where, if he can win just about two fights, beginning Wednesday night, the light-heavyweight division again will lose its champion via abdication.

Conn will meet Henry Cooper, Brooklyn heavyweight, in a 12-round bout at Madison Square Garden and on outcome of the match will depend his next move.

According to tentative plans, a victory will earn him a shot at Johnny Paycheck, of Des Moines, who on the same evening will be pitching and catching with one Pedro Georgi at Orlando, Fla.

UPSET CHANCE

Paycheck figures to get his man all right, but there is at least a slim chance that Cooper will score an upset by virtue of the fact that he is a good puncher and a good punch absorber. However, as far as Conn is concerned the match is virtually won already, and his habbling has done almost entirely with Paycheck, who is better known than Cooper, and Joe Louis, who also has a wide acquaintance.

"Sure I want to fight the heavyweights — Paycheck and those other fellows, and Louis especially," Conn said today.

His enthusiasm for getting in there with the big fellows makes back to the success he has had so far with them—in one bout. This was his knockout over Gus Dorazio a few months ago.

Anyway he insists he is growing all the time and will weigh in at about 177 for Cooper, who will be up around 190.

BARREN FIELD

Importance of the bout, as mentioned before, rests in the fact that it may play a part in causing the boxing commissions to find a new 175-pound champion. It can be predicted with more or less certainty that if Conn can beat Cooper he definitely will do little if any more fighting among his light heavies until such time as he has to rejoin them.

It just so happens that, as usual, there are no good light heavies around to challenge the champion, and as usual, he is going over into pastures where the greenbacks are greener, the heavyweight division.

67 Players Start In Coast Classic

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 18 (INS)—Final play in the 15th annual Los Angeles open tournament today found a field of 67 players starting the last 18 holes with Clayton Hearner, of Lincoln, N. C., maintaining a two-stroke lead.

Jimmy Hines, Wilford Wherle, Dutch Harrison and others who had been close to the pace were lated among yesterday's eliminators.

Refner, Martin On Bowser Card

Almost overshadowing the double main event, in which the world's champion and two former champions are featured, Ernest Franz Henner, the rugged Texas German, and Bull Martin are expected to provide fireworks of all colors when they meet in the semi-final of Promoter Paul Bowser's weekly wrestling tournament Wednesday night at the Boston Arena.

In the twin features, Steve (Crusher) Casey, title holder, defends his crown against Rebel Rob Fitch and Marvin Westenberg and Yon Robert meet in a return bout that is a real grudge.

Henner, who has soared to the top lately as a claimant for the "bad man" title, has his eyes pointed ever further ahead than that and his big goal Wednesday night will be not Bull Martin, but Steve Casey. Henner plans well ahead as you can see and has been heard to grunt lately that the Bull as a bad man should be leading those daisy chain dances.

Casey will be meeting Russell for the first time and big Stephen is apt to find himself in more hot water than he bargains for. Russell never rests for a minute on the hot starts and he is as tough as the next fellow.

Recipes and Menus by Martha Lee, every day in the Boston American.

(I reprint the kid's letter and give you my word that the entire contents were from his own pen.)

Dear Pop:

Now that you are in Miami, I wish you'd tear a hole in the middle of RACING FORM and get some SUNBURN. Mom decided to take advantage of your absence, and went looking through your private drawers. She found everything there but the BREMEN. She came across the money you put away for a rainy day, and the first cloudy afternoon found her rushing out on a SHOPPING TOUR. You should see the hat she bought. It came straight from PARIS, and judging from the price it must have come by special convey. She then decided to buy some clothes for our Florida trip, but when she got finished paying for her dresses, decided that my socks with holes in them would be cooler for the SOUTH.

Mom was also going to buy new diapers for Ken, Jr., but not having enough cash left, she is using your old handkerchiefs instead. Pop, we left the baby crawling around in your room, and by mistake he tore up your contract with the Mirror. Yesterday he received a wire of thanks from the editor.

Love, WOODIE.

Dear Woodie:

I just phoned your mother to send you to reform school, because judging from your letter, you have all the earmarks of a newspaperman. This Miami climate is doing me a lot of good. Even my car looks better with Florida air in the tires. Sorry to read about it being zero in New York. The only zero we see here is on the roulette wheels, but it knocks us just as cold.

Tell mother not to forget to phone my bookie about placing a few dollars for me on NEMO-T at New Orleans and FORTINING MAIL and OUR BUD at Tropical. They may net me the price of your railroad ticket here. Love, POP.

SMALLEST CROWD OF SEASON SEES BRUINS

Jackson's 2 Goals Help Down Amerks

By BILL GRIMES

Although they didn't look a great deal better than when they were smacked around by Rangers, the Bruins, due to inferior opposition, came up with a 6 to 2 victory over the Americans last night and slipped back into a tie with the Maple Leafs for second place.

Little Art Jackson was the star of the game. He came up with two fine goals and assisted on one scored by Bill "Flash" Hollett.

KRAUT LINE STARS

As usual, the Kraut line figured prominently in the scoring. Bobby Bauer, who has been handicapped in shooting all season, due to a lame shoulder, beat Earl Robertson for two goals. Milt Schmidt came up with a tally and was credited with an assist while Woody Dumart figured in three goals.

Al Murray, the hard hitting little defense man, and Tommy Anderson did the scoring for the Americans. Murray beat Frankie Brimsek for a nice goal on a clever play by Murray Armstrong, who broke away while the Bruins were putting on a power play, catching Capt. Dit Clapper down the ice. Armstrong pulled Jack Shewchuk out of position and then passed to Murray, who backhanded the puck into the strings for the first goal of the night.

ROBERTSON BRILLIANT

In the second period Eddie Wiseman rifled a shot at Frankie Brimsek and the puck caromed off the Boston goalie's pads, hit Tommy Anderson on the leg and flew into the cage.

Although he was beaten for a half dozen goals, Earl Robertson made many sensational saves. Time and again, he was left on his own and was obliged to battle four and even five attackers. Robertson was credited with 30 saves against 21 for Frankie Brimsek.

After the Americans had scored about halfway through the first period, the Bruins tried to put on the pressure to get over the equalizer, but to no avail, until Busher Jackson drew a penalty for high-sticking Jack Crawford.

Just prior to his penalty, Busher had been smacked in the mouth by Doc Romnes' Jack, who the latter collided with Jack Crawford. Busher went berserk and was caught when he attempted to square accounts with the Bruin defense man.

Just as soon as Busher went off, the Kraut line went into action. First, Bobby Bauer scored on a three-man attack with Milt Schmidt and Woody Dumart, and 20 seconds later Schmidt put the Bruins out in front after taking a pass from Dumart.

There was no more scoring until the 14th minute of the second period, when Hollett and Art Jackson teamed up for a snappy goal and about a half minute later, Anderson put the Amerks back in the game by kicking an Eddie Wiseman rebound into the cage.

Then came Bobby Bauer's second tally, which was on a nice play. Crawford started down the right wing boards and passed in to the corner to Dumart, who, in turn, centered the puck and Bauer, cutting in fast, slapped it home.

Five seconds before the close of this period, Art Jackson counted on a play that was started by Jack Portland, with Herbie Cain as the middle man and in the final chapter, Hollett tore in fast, picked up a Cain rebound and scored the sixth and last goal.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

Through their 6 to 2 victory over Americans last night the Bruins moved into a second place tie with the Maple Leafs . . . But that's about all they did, for the wildest imagination couldn't visualize the Rossmen as winners of the Stanley Cup . . .

The crowd was thousands smaller than any that has turned out for a Bruin game this season . . . Although he picked up three points, one more than any of his mates, Art Jackson drew the No. 4 spot in the all star selection . . .

Eddie Shore came in with Americans to watch the game . . . He's scouring the country trying to pick up some hockey talent for his Indians of Springfield . . . Shore has been spending considerable time in New York . . . So much in fact that Nels Stewart said he expects to see Eddie in American uniform.

Manager Red Dutton has been on the warpath for weeks . . . He's riding all of his charges high, wide and handsome . . . Dutton was relaxed enough at the start of the game to light up a stogie but when Bobby Bauer and Milt Schmidt scored two goals in twenty seconds, he hit the roof.

SCHMIDT INJURED

On the first play of the game Schmidt was tossed into the boards and injured his back . . . In the second period Milt took off and hit Al Murray with a flying check and then was dropped heavily by Wilf Field . . . After the game Schmidt spent a half hour on the rubbing table with an ice pack on his back. Mel Hill's knee came through with flying colors, but he received a cut lip when Busher Jackson smacked him . . . Mel said that with one exception his knee didn't give him the slightest trouble . . . Frankie Brimsek, who has been a "flu" victim for three days, came through nicely but he was very weak at the end of the conflict.

Dick Loftus, who patrolled many outfields in the American Association and also in the National League, is a confirmed hockey nut . . . He attends every Bruins game, commuting from Concord.

Due to the fact that play had been stopped because of an offside, Jack Shewchuk shouldn't have been penalized in the first period.

CHUCK COMES BACK

Big Chuck Conacher is playing better hockey than he has produced since before he was sold to Detroit by Toronto . . . He now gets a good break off the defense and can still make that puck whistle . . . Stewart says that he must be getting blind for he's missed more nets this season than he ever did . . . Considering that he's been in the N. H. L. for 16 years, Hooley Smith is a wonder . . . He's not as belligerent as in the old days and much of his speed has disappeared but Hooley is still dangerous . . . And, very brainy.

The New York Rangers are still going strong . . . They shut out the Red Wings last night and have weathered 17 games without a defeat . . . The Blue Shirts haven't been beaten since the middle of November.

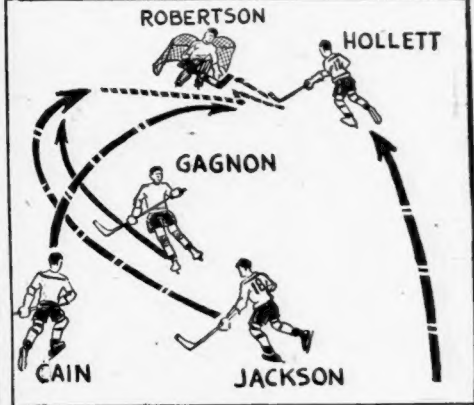

It's a good thing that Les Canadiens came up with a 2 to 1 win over Chicago last night or there wouldn't be enough fans in the Forum tomorrow night to warrant hiring an usher . . . The Flying Frenchmen have put many gray hairs in Pit Lepine's head.

N. H. L. Standings

Rangers	15	5	7	33	72	34
BRUINS	14	6	3	31	70	49
Toronto	14	7	3	31	70	46
Chicago	9	12	1	19	41	67
Canadiens	8	13	2	18	53	63
Americans	7	16	1	15	49	70
Detroit	6	14	3	15	37	63

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS

Boston 6, Americans 2.
Rangers 3, Detroit 6.
Canadiens 2, Chicago 1.

Cunningham Maps 'Easy' Track Campaign

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (AP)—In the cannon-infested confines of the 245th coast artillery armory in Brooklyn, where the only shots fired came out of a starter's harmless gun, Glen Cunningham proved Saturday he isn't dizzy, in spite of running around in circles so many years.

Opening the winter track season, the tireless Kansan slammed his way around the 880-yard route in the K. of C. meeting in good enough time to beat a select field—and to beat a select field—and to beat a select field.

Indicate he probably is in for another of his very good seasons, and possibly his last.

Cunningham, 30, last August isn't going into this campaign in the gay and reckless spirit of his younger years.

This time, he is going to take his time—not while a race is actually in progress, of course, but in preparing for one; in resting between meets, and in slowing down the blistering pace he has traveled the last eight years.

He said before he raced his competitors into the ground in the 880 in 1:56.1 that he was through arriving in towns in the afternoon, running the same nights and then driving off to some other destination—all without taking a long breath.
